Here We Grow Again!

Announcing an expansion of our Campus and our Children's Arts Education Program!

Since opening our doors eight years ago, the WHBPAC has quietly built the most respected, extensive and well attended Children's Performing Arts Program on the East End of Long Island.

Over 130,000 children have participated in or experienced the transformative power of live theatre at The Center.

Now, we've outgrown our current facility. Through the generosity of our Board of Directors and dedicated donors, we've acquired adjacent property that will allow us to expand our children's programming year round.

Starting May 2007, we'll offer a variety of year round camps and classes in theatre arts and technical skills for children of all ages. This Program is designed to inspire, educate and provide a safe haven for creative expression.

Find out more about our schedule and curriculum! Just sign-up for the 2007 Children's Arts Education Program mailing list by:

County Caves In

Traffic Disaster Ends, Cone System that Worked Restored

By Dan Rattiner

I would like to know who dreamt up this idea of shutting down all the shortcuts on County Road 39 this September? It must have been thought up in August. The program to use traffic cones to make the center passing lane a one-way eastbound lane during the rush hour in the morning had been an enormous success. People were surging through to work. But the funding was coming to an end.

Should the funding be renewed? The cost of this program, to put the cones out at 5:30 a.m. and then remove them at 9:30 a.m. was $7,000 a week. Somewhere in the bowels of the County Center in Hauppauge, this question about what to do when the funds run out must have been posed to the traffic people in August. They thought and they thought.

They must have remembered how in July, everybody had emitted a huge cheer and clinked champagne glasses as the great traffic tie up that has cursed the East End every morning for years suddenly dissolved. There would be no more desperate attempts by motorists to gain an edge by finding alternate ways to get to work in the Hamptons by taking shortcuts. They could just use County Road 39 itself. What a treat!

So what do we do, the County bureaucrats must have asked? Extend the wildly successful third lane cone program into September, October and November? Or, I know, a hot shot traffic engineer must have said, let's bring things back to the way they were before the third lane program where we had all the traffic jams, but add a new twist, by physically SHUTTING DOWN ALL THE BACK ROAD SHORTCUTS. This suggestion must have been received, at first, with total silence.

"Hear me out. Believe me, I have heard this has worked up in Elmira. It will work," he must have continued. "We put up signs, do not cross double line hash marks, one way arrows and concrete barriers where all the shortcuts return to County Road 39. And THEN ALL THE TRAFFIC HAS TO FUNNEL INTO THE TRAFFIC JAM."

More silence.

"Know what causes this traffic jam? It's all these shortcut people coming back to County Road 39 and cutting back into the flow of traffic. The cars on the highway have to slow down to let them in. So we put a stop to that. That's it! That's the answer! A clean one lane shot down County Road 39 with no stopping!"

More silence.

And then a foreman must have stepped forward.

"All right everybody, that's the answer. Let's get busy identifying all those shortcuts. Who knows a few? There must be four or five. Let's identify them and we'll get the workmen out there to shut them down."

> "Let's get busy identifying all those shortcuts. Let's identify them and we'll get the workmen out there to shut them down."

And so, beginning around August 25, all the hardhats, trucks, bulldozers and cranes could be seen on these narrow shortcut roads at the points where they come back into County Road 39. There were piles of sand. There were MEN WORKING signs. And slowly, over the next ten days, at a cost estimated in excess of a half a million dollars, the barriers were installed, the roads were blocked off or rerouted, the signs and arrows were put up, and the motorists, scooting by at high speed on the two lanes looked out at the work with worried expressions.

In a stroke of unbelievable optimism, the instructions to the construction workers included the order to LEAVE UP the sign on County Road 39 that had been put up in July after the traffic jam melted away, which read Slow Down, Speeders Will Be Ticketed.

Monday morning, September 11 was the big day. The blocking of all the shortcuts was completed and put into effect at 4 a.m. At 5 a.m., the workmen who every day had installed the third lane program with the traffic cones failed to appear, and at 6 p.m., the floodgates opened. Traffic immediately backed up for as much as four miles.

Somewhere at the County Center, perhaps on the second day after it was realized the hope that all the problem was that people needed to get used to this new thing was not happening, a man walked into a room full of highway department people sitting at computers.

He slapped his forehead.

"They call them SHORTCUTS! I GET it! Short Cut! As in you cut along a back road and things get shorter. THAT'S WHY THEY CALL THEM THAT! And we just TOOK AWAY the short cuts."

At that very moment, numerous motorists, sitting motionless in the traffic jam, stared at the sign reading Slow Down, Speeders Will Be Ticketed, and they had only one thought in their mind.

We have to find this guy, take him out back, and shoot him.

By Thursday afternoon, which was September 29, two weeks later and less than twelve hours before what was sure to be an angry meeting of the general public at Southampton Town Hall, the horrendous new traffic jam continued, but Steve Levy, the County Executive, promised swift action.

"I have asked Commissioner Dormer," he said, "to have the County Police Aviation Department order the launching of a helicopter to fly over County Road 39 for half a day to observe the situation. The pilot will be accompanied by two county officials, a member of the Southampton Town Police Department, who will advise the county officials, and a video technician who will video the problem and will, afterwards, arrange to edit it and have it shown so we can study it and determine the best future action to mitigate this problem. We're committed to this action."

In other words, they were on the case.

It was fair to suggest that, in this situation, there must have been something more going on than just the soothing promises, persuasive powers and hocus pocus of the genius engineer who came up with this. And there was. It was the tipping of the earth as it spun around the sun.

In the summertime, the sunrise was around 5:30 in the morning, and the men putting the cones out could do so in daylight. As autumn proceeded, however, the sun rose later and later. And so to put the cones out at 5:30 a.m. would be in the dark and dangerous. Thus it was decided not to continue the third lane program past the summertime. They could be back in May.

Had anyone thought to simply move the cone program ahead an hour so they bring the people out in the light at 6:30 to get it ready for 7 in the belief that three quarters of a loaf is better than nothing? Apparently not.

Had anyone thought to accept an offer from the Town of Southampton to provide every day in the autumn two police cars with bright lights, that would ride directly behind the people putting in the cones and serve as a "pace car" for the morning commute behind him while keeping the cone workers safe?

Apparently not. The County has its own police cars. And the County Highway Department are the workers. They would protect them. By pulling them off the job on

A Unique Concept That Will Revolutionize Dental Implant Treatment

HAVE YOU LOST OR ARE YOU LOSING YOUR TEETH?

If so, you may be a candidate for Dental Implants.

At the offices of Dr. Howard A. Popper we have placed thousands of implants since 1985, including Long Island's FIRST "Teeth in an Hour" THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR EXPERIENCE.

Your life can be dramatically transformed with the immediate load-immediate function-immediate smile procedure utilizing THE NEW NOBEL GUIDE FOR COMPUTER-GUIDED, minimally invasive, flapless, pain free implant surgery. Dental implants improve appearance, comfort, speech, confidence, self-esteem and maintain your bone for a lifetime. Dental implants contribute to better overall health and improve quality of life for patients.

Transfer Patients & Second Opinions WELCOME!

Teeth in an Hour, the latest concept in high-tech dentistry. Sophisticated 3-D radiology creates precise imaging of patient's jaw, and robotic technology in Sweden fabricates the permanent restoration which is placed with the Branemark System Implants - in the space of one hour.

The Branemark Novum System™ can provide patients with implants and permanent teeth all in one day, AND THE NEW-ALL-ON-4 can provide low-cost acrylic bridges in one day.

FIXED TEETH IN ONE DAY!

Implants can secure dentures, restore chewing and enjoyment of food, and impede progressive jawbone loss. No more wobbling dentures, irritated gums, gooey adhesives and filed down teeth for bridgework. Single teeth to full-mouth treatment, utilizing NOBEL PERFECT Implants for optimum esthetics.

12+ BR McMansions May Solve Affordable Housing Shortage

By Dan Rattiner

Hampton Township is considering a plan that would link up the unused bedrooms of the big McMansions in the Hamptons with those who need affordable housing.

The plan came up at the weekly Hampton Board meeting last Thursday after a prolonged discussion about what a shame it is that the middle class can't afford to live here anymore.

"I know that with our current programs, we have just barely touched the problem of affordable housing," Mayor Wilson said. "We build 25 affordable homes, and people move into them, and it helps, but that's it. We can do what we can do."

"We just don't have the money," said Town Comptroller Art Benson.

The Commissioner of Affordable Housing, Fred Schneider, noted that it all comes down to bedrooms. The 25 affordable homes just completed and given out by lottery each have two bedrooms, so this is fifty bedrooms, which means at best a hundred people.

Commissioner of Transportation Roadman noted that a hundred fewer people commuting here from up Island would make a dent on Route 27's traffic jams that might hurry up traffic for "sixty seconds."

"What about all the bedrooms in all the McMansions?" the mayor wanted to know. "People have fifteen bedrooms. Who needs fifteen bedrooms?"

"People who have fifteen kids, I guess," Schneider said.

"Who has fifteen kids?"

"Almost nobody."

"Well, I guess it's an ego thing."

"This is America," Roadman said. "The more bedrooms you have, the bigger success you are."

"Well, we have all these people who need homes," the Mayor said. "That seems to be the only source of affordable housing, those unused bedrooms."

And so a plan was put forward. The Town Attorney is going to draft a bill that requires all residents who own homes with more than twelve bedrooms to file paperwork explaining who is using each bedroom. Perhaps all the bedrooms can be explained. People with more children would be allowed to have more bedrooms. They'll have to name names and show birth certificates. The guest bedrooms will have to be limited. The limit would be four. Beyond that, any bedrooms that are not adequately accounted for, will, after a one-year grace period, be put into the affordable housing pool, and in the usual local lottery process, be doled out as needed.

> Beyond that, any bedrooms that are not adequately accounted for will, after a one-year grace period, be put into the affordable housing pool.

"We think that by enforcing these rules, we can provide as many as 14,000 bedrooms for middle class and blue collar workers," the Mayor said, after a rough estimate by Town Building Inspector Hammermill using a calculation that was made and given to the mayor. "This would be an astounding achievement," the Mayor concluded.

"And it could solve the traffic problem getting into and out of here," said Transportation Commissioner Roadman.

"It could also mix the different social groups in town in a wonderful, wonderful way," said Freddie Brackston, who owns the Hampton Harbor Trailer Park. "As we do at my trailer

This new proposal is not a law just yet, of course. It has to be written up and brought back to the Board by the attorney. There have to be public hearings. And then it has to be approved by majority vote of the board members, something that might not happen before the end of the month.

Nevertheless, many in the audience at the Board meeting wanted to talk about the proposal for a while. And the Mayor indulged them.

"I think this is the stupidest idea I have ever heard," said Joe Bruno, who attends all the board meetings and always has an opinion on everything.

"A man's home is his castle."

"What I'd like to know," said Cecila Engles, a local real estate agent, "is who gets the rent money?"

The Mayor, who had suggested this proposal, gave this answer.

"Everything would be on a one year lease. We'd establish an affordable rent. And it would be paid to the homeowner. There are expenses in keeping up these bedrooms, no one doubts that."

"I think this proposal, if made into an ordinance, will become a model for similar ordinances around the country," said Pam Boone, the head of the local Food Pantry. "We live in a time of Global Warming. We cannot afford these excesses in times such as these. If people build things they then don't use, that's the sort of waste I'm talking about."

"It's like keeping the engine running in your car in your driveway in the event you might want to use it sometime," Erwin Foosh, the owner of Hampton Bike Rental, said.

"We have to strike a blow," Ms. Boone continued.

"Let's hear what other people have to say," the Mayor said.

"I don't think the rich are going to like this ordinance," Hattie Green said, folding her arms across her chest.

"Maybe the rich could BUY their way out of this," Algae Harrison, the owner of the Harrison Jewelry Store said. "Like the rich did during the Civil War when they didn't want their sons to go off as soldiers. They'd pay an amount and somebody else would serve in their son's place."

"This isn't about money," the Mayor said, "and we'll have none of that. It's about solving a problem. There is no Civil War."

"Well there COULD be a civil war," said Sol Teterman, a real estate agent. "The rich could rise up."

"The rich never rise up," said Harrison.

"But this is un-American," continued Teterman. "Don't say it isn't. You get rich and you buy a house with five bedrooms, then you get richer and you buy a house with ten bedrooms. You've become the great American success story. You take your friends on tours through your house. And these are the ten bedrooms. Then you get even richer than that and you buy a house with fifteen bedrooms."

"None of those would be affected," the Mayor said, "except the last one."

Teterman sat down.

"What about somebody's kid who goes off to college for four years?" a woman asked.

"Exemption," the Mayor said.

"I don't know if the middle class or the blue collar workers are going to be willing to live in these places," said Alex Rutkowski, a man who owns a swimming pool building business. "Some of these rich people are pretty nasty."

"Well, then," the Mayor said, "they wouldn't have to take this housing. They could stay outside the Hamptons and commute. Just like they do now."

And on that note, the meeting was adjourned, and it will be Topic One next week when the Town Attorney is expected back with this proposal as a legally worded bill. •

Smell This?

Maple Syrup, Propane, Fish, Manure, Chlorine and Potatoes

By Dan Rattiner

Last Monday afternoon, the staff of Dan's Papers had to be evacuated from our headquarters building in Bridgehampton because of what smelled like a propane gas leak. A few of us bravely went back inside after we got everybody else outside, this publisher included, risking our lives from possible asphyxiation or an explosion, to find the source of the propane leak. It wasn't in the basement, the ground floor, second floor or attic or out on the second floor outside deck.

And then, after 15 minutes of this, it occurred to me. We don't use propane anywhere in the building. And I ought to know, because I own the building. And so we ought to inform the police and the fire department about the situation.

What we learned was that the smell of propane caused complaints and evacuations all the way from Kmart down to where we are and investigators had been sent out and they would let us know what they found. In ten minutes they actually stopped in, and said they had been unable to find any source for this leak, and so believe it might have come from a propane delivery truck roaring down the Montauk Highway from west to east spewing stuff from a leaky gas tank as they went. They were going to make phone calls to the propane companies in the area to see if there were any reported cases of — when the guy got there to make the delivery he didn't have any.

I am a firm believer in smells wafting sometimes great distances from one place to another to cause behavior adjustments. Last winter, there was the case of the maple syrup smell that had settled over Manhattan. I was in the city at the time, and I vividly recall it filling the Jitney bus I was on between 79th Street and 40th as the bus drove down to its final stop before heading out to the Hamptons.

> The workman slipped with the welding torch, the top of the tank popped off, and this gas came rushing out. Nobody knew what the gas was.

It was in the news later in the day and then that evening on television and then in the newspapers the next morning. It stayed about two hours and nobody really knew what to make of it. Then it went away. What was the appropriate response? Run to the shelters because of an enemy maple attack? Look for the follow up announcing it was a new perfume from Saks and come on over?

There was no maple syrup that might have exploded in the entire city of New York. And it wasn't butterscotch. Or mocha.

As for this propane attack this week, there was an article in the Wednesday morning New York Post on page 8 about a strange gas that had hospitalized or injured between 40 and 50 people near the IKEA store in Elizabeth, New Jersey. It had happened about 3 p.m. which was just an hour before the propane had descended on the western end of downtown Bridgehampton and it occurred to me this might have been a second swooping down of this "unknown" gas.

This Wednesday edition of the New York Post, however, said this had all happened "yesterday," which would have been Tuesday in a Wednesday morning newspaper, which would have been a day after our smell, but sometimes a story is delayed and what happened "yesterday" could have referred to Monday, not Tuesday.

The gas in Elizabeth was tracked down to an old unused pressurized gas tank that was being dismantled at an abandoned factory nearby to the IKEA. The workman slipped with the welding torch, the top of the tank popped off, and this gas came rushing out. Nobody knows what the gas was. The owners of the abandoned factory are long gone. Down the street, the strollers dropped their IKEA shopping bags and, stricken, slumped to the sidewalk. One can only imagine the chaos.

In a related matter back here in the Hamptons, the towns of Southampton and East Hampton have been wrestling for the last couple of weeks with the problem of a smell that might soon emanate from a proposed restaurant on the Montauk Highway. The proposal is for a Hampton BBQ, which would be the first of its kind in these parts. It is to be located in the former Alison's At the Beach restaurant on the corner of the Montauk Highway and Town Line Road in Sagaponack, and as the property is in the Town of Southampton, the town board would be responsible for making the decisions about it. However, it was recently determined that there is a law in the rule book that if any property is within fifty feet of a neighboring town and that town might be affected by the project — such as the gorgeous smell of barbecued pulled pork sandwiches — then the neighboring town has to approve it too. So that's how East Hampton got involved.

Imagine the smells out here of the salt sea air down at the beach, the smell of horses on a horse farm, the smell of decaying shellfish out at the bays, the smell of fresh mowed lawns at the mansions and golf courses, the smells of potatoes and dirt as the reapers take them out of the ground, the smell of cows and goats, the smell of a field of wildflowers, the smell of fish at the docks, the smell of swimming pool chlorine, the smell of suntan lotion, all wafting upward, drifting this way and that, and then swooping back down at unexpected moments.

So many smells, so little time. •

September 15.

Tom Neely, who is the Southampton Town Transportation Commissioner had this to say when he told me about the County's plan to block the accesses.

"It's their road. They can do what they want."

Finally, at 10 a.m. Friday morning, the meeting at Southampton Town Hall took place. There had been a flurry of meetings late into Thursday evening the night before, and still more meetings on Friday morning.

And so, when 10 a.m. came, and the barbarians were at the gates of the town meeting room, the assembled officials had only one thing to say.

"The cones will be back on Wednesday, October 4 or at the latest, by the weekend."

That would be just a few days from that morning. And it pretty much silenced everybody who attended, except for the politicians who made speeches all patting each other on the back. The cones will be in place through Thanksgiving, and after that and through the winter, there probably won't be any need of them.

Nobody is talking about how all this got worked out but what we do know is that there will be the usual County police and County workers involved, since it is a County Road, and there would be no need of the Town Police or Highway Department workers coming in vigilante fashion and taking over the road, as had been rumored.

And that leaves only one question. Before the cones went up in June, people along the narrow roads of the short cuts complained that the morning commute cars and trucks were causing excessively busy traffic flow on their streets.

Now, with the cones back, and the commuter traffic zipping along problem free, there is no need for any commuters to be using the short cuts. So the question is will the County spend another half a million dollars to remove all the barriers they just put up, or will they just leave them the way they are, which just inconveniences everybody living along these back roads who now have no reason to want any barriers up?

Time will tell. •

The Hamptons Real Estate Commando Strikes Again

By Dan Rattiner

Last week, Southampton Town spent $255,000 to preserve 54 acres of vacant land in Westhampton. This puts an end to the dreams of a local Quogue entrepreneur, who some years ago hoped to create "Hampton Water," a beverage that would be "bottled at the source" from a well in our treasured aquifer just under the protected pine barrens north of Westhampton. Hampton Water, this precious commodity, would be shipped around the world to compete with Perrier, Pellegrino and Fiji water.

If these facts seem a bit bizarre — the first because it seems so cheap and the second because it seems so, well, unlikely — then you don't know Joe Gazza. If Donald Trump sees himself as a sort of the royalty of the real estate world in this country, Joe Gazza sees himself as the commando of the real estate world in the Hamptons.

Joe Gazza, who is an attorney, locates very unlikely parcels of land in the Hamptons that seem hopelessly undevelopable, and he buys them cheap and then tries to dream something up. Oh, he does regular real estate too, but in my opinion, it's the commando stuff that's his specialty.

I recall for years there was a crude wooden sign on the vacant triangle of land on the north side of the Montauk Highway just west of Water Mill as you come up the hill from the east — a very prominent piece of property — which read GAZZA and then 516-653-5766 brushed on it in black paint. It was privately owned before Joe bought it and it is seen as a small public park area that could never be built upon, and so Joe thought to find a buyer. I think the Town finally did buy it after running out of patience. Joe never tries to gouge anybody, just turn a bit of a profit.

Then came Joe's idea for Hampton Water. Land in the Pine Barrens is privately owned but entirely protected from development. No

CABLEVISION SILENCES PRESIDENTIAL SPEECH ON LI

By Dan Rattiner

Just after noon, on Tuesday, September 19, President Bush gave a very important speech to the nation. It started at 12:20 p.m., it was broadcast on all news channels and he was ten minutes into it when everyone on Long Island watching had the sound suddenly go out. This was an Island-wide audio failure over the Cablevision system, and it affected all 800,000 subscribers from Queens to Montauk Point on all channels. You could see the President's lips moving but you couldn't hear what he was saying.

Subscribers tried channel hopping to see if he was saying anything on CNN or MSNBC or any of the other channels, but it was all the same. Nothing. Whatever it was Mr. Bush was saying was heard everywhere else in the country, but not on Long Island.

As for Cablevision, they rushed around trying to find the cause of the problem and fix it. It took them more than thirty minutes to get the sound restored, by which time Mr. Bush had leaned forward toward the camera, spoken a few final sober words and then faded to black.

On CBS, the sound came back on five minutes into the next program that was on, which was Bob Barker's "The Price is Right."

During the rest of the day, there was considerable discussion about what the President might have said. Some people said the Democrats had cut the sound off. Others said maybe it was a terrorist plot. A few people said it could very well have been the Republicans. Whatever the President says these days doesn't go over very well. It might have been the Republicans.

Or, it might also have been the Republicans because if the terrorists had knocked the sound off, then Mr. Bush and his team had pre-

GEOFFREY BOTT, 62

Geoffrey Bott of Nautique National Flag in Westhampton Beach, formerly in Aquebogue, died at Peconic Bay Medical Center in Riverhead on September 27. The Aquebogue resident was 62 years old.

People will remember Geoff and his London double-decker bus from which he and his men, sporting can-do attitudes, delivered and installed flagpoles and flags all around the East End from the Nautique store.

He was born in Bristol, England on July 5, 1944 to William and Mildred (nee Wright) Bott. He is survived by his wife, Laura (nee Mooney) and a son, Geoffrey William George Bott, both of Aquebogue.

Funeral services will be held on Saturday at 2 p.m. at St. Mark's Episcopal Church on Main Street and Potunk Lane in Westhampton Beach. Reverend Ronald Wickey will officiate.

Those wishing to remember Geoffrey and his family in a special way can make a contribution to the Crohn's and Colitis Foundation of America, Honor & Memorial Gifts, 386 Park Avenue South, 17th Floor, New York, NY 10016-8804 or the National Kidney Foundation, 30 East 33rd Street, New York, NY 10016.

Well, how about UNDER it? Joe thought. He was, perhaps thinking of the oil rights under the Alaskan tundra. All you'd see there is a small oil rig.

Indeed, Hampton Water is probably a very good idea. The water we drink comes from an enormous underground lake that exists under eastern Long Island bounded by Patchogue, Southampton and Riverhead. It is very pure water and very tasty. It could sell. Just a tiny straw in this big underground lake, what could be so wrong? Joe must have thought. As for land on top of the ground, all you'd need was a couple of spigots. Trucks could pull up and load up, then take it all to a bottling and warehouse building elsewhere. Maybe hundreds and thousands of jobs could result from such an enterprise. And Hampton Water would be known around the world. Would Southampton town give him the right to do this? Absolutely not.

Well, you've got to hand it to the guy. He's made a successful career out of all this, although almost entirely under the radar. And now, I think, he is sort of retiring with the intention to just dabble a bit here and there.

The 27 acres he owns are in bits and pieces scattered about, a few even north of the Sunrise. Who the hell knows what he paid for each of them over the years, but for $140,000 for the lot, which converts to $6,000 an acre — a pittance on today's market — it probably worked out for him. And he probably had fun doing it. • vented anything terrible from happening after that. They'd nipped it in the bud.

Anyway, usually everybody knows what the President is going to say, anyway. So it was no great loss.

Cablevision workers, coming up covered with grease and dirt from the bowels of that company's technical network facilities in Medford after crawling around among the wires, said that they weren't sure what it was, but they apparently wiggled something down there in a junction box that controls the user emergency alert system, and it got fixed.

"We worked quickly to resolve the matter and apologize to our customers for the disruption," company spokesperson Jim Maiella said. •

There are few people in the world who are obsessed about something more than antique car buffs are obsessed about their old cars. They get together, as they did on the grounds of the BridgeHampton Historical Society last weekend, and you hear a conversation like this. The two individuals involved are facing side by side white sedans built by the French car manufacturer Citroen Maserati in 1972. Actually, they are not COMPLETELY identical, one was built in 1973. (This model of Citroen was only built for three years. There are maybe a hundred of them still on the road today.)

"Look at the headlights."

"I see what you're saying. They're different."

To an ordinary person, they are not different. But they are.

"My headlights turn slightly as you go around a corner so you can see what's there better. They have a cable that attaches to the steering wheel. You turn the wheel, the lights turn like eyeballs."

"They didn't have that in 1972," the second person says glumly. "Any other advances?"

"I think that's it."

"Can I try the eyeballs?"

"Sure." The two open the doors and are about to get in, when still a THIRD 1972 Citroen Maserati SM comes onto the lawn. It rumbles over.

"Who the hell is that?"

The fact is that about ninety antique cars descended upon Bridgehampton from all over the country on Friday afternoon and began to array themselves on the big front lawn of the BridgeHampton Historical Society. You might have seen these cars there on Friday, and then their owners later in the evening as they shared stories, drinks and food by lantern light under the big white tent that was set up on the side lawn of the Historical Society grounds.

SAGG STORE REOPENS, SAGAPONACKERS CHEER

By David Lion Rattiner

Truman Capote once called Sagaponack "Kansas with a sea breeze." That's because the little village has been able to avoid the onslaught of high-end retail stores and restaurants that is the Hamptons today. Sagaponack is the "un-Hampton" and is much like it was a hundred years ago, only now modern cars and telephone poles occupy the streets instead of horses and buggies. The vast potato fields, farmhouses, simply gorgeous modern houses and the plethora of summer families that visit Sagaponack each summer to enjoy its American feel and its vast ocean beaches make calling Sagaponack special a very deep understatement.

There is only one business in all of Sagaponack and it has truly been able to withstand the test of time. It is today what it was 120 years ago, a post office and a general store, only now, horsewhips and pitchforks are not sold there.

For more than two decades, the store has been rented to operators who were outside the original family that owned the store, the Hildreths of Sagaponack. However, the store is now back in the family and is open for business because of the astonishing hard work by Richard and Karen Thayer, who have been renovating the store themselves since the winter of last year. Richard's mother is a Hildreth, and the store officially opened for business this past Wednesday. I stopped in to talk with the couple the day before they opened. I found Richard doing inventory in a notebook in the back of the store. Up front, Karen gave me a big smile. The pride they have in their store gleams in their eyes as they stand next to the new, handmade cabinets and tables built by their neighbor in Sagaponack, and the paint on the walls, which Karen applied herself. They

On Saturday morning, you would have seen old 1933 Bentleys, 1953 Austin Healeys, 1957 MGs, 1932 Model A Fords, 1955 Porsches, 1954 Corvettes and 1961 Cadillac convertibles, and even a 1952 Lazzarini, a one of a kind racing car built in Argentina by a coach maker who used the car to defend the honor of his country from a bunch of North American racers and their Ferraris who had come to town to race the locals. All these cars here in Bridgehampton were lined up in neat little rows so their owners could show them off and work on them to prepare for the upcoming Bridgehampton Grand Prix tour to begin at 10 a.m.

Beginning at that hour, one car and crew went off every five minutes for the next two hours, the cars each bearing a driver and navigator attempting to follow a not so complicated 130 mile route through the eastern end of Long Island. It would take five hours to complete this tour and the crew and car making the tour in the time closest to a preset time allowance would win first prize. So stopwatches were in the hands of all the navigators as they went off.

The route took all the cars off the lawn of the Historical Society, down Main Street to Ocean Road, and then on one big loop on some country roads in Bridgehampton and Sagaponack where races were actually held — in excess of 150 miles an hour — for several years in the 1930s. After completing the tour of this circuit (Sagaponack Road, Sagg Main, Bridge Lane and Ocean Road), the route went to Southampton, Westhampton and Riverhead, then out to Orient, then back to Riverhead — with a stop for lunch at the Meeting House Creek in Aquebogue, then back all the way to Bridgehampton. One hundred thirty miles in all.

Along the way there were flat tires, overheated radiators, batteries that got fidgety and stops for oil changes, but except for a few, all of the 43 racers that started made it back in their tour against the stopwatch. Another 18 drivers went on the tour, but without the demands of the stopwatch. Presumably their cars were not reliable enough to be counted upon to complete the course successfully, but they wanted to go, anyway. In any case, they dotted the roads of the East End, and the fact that motorists coming the other way had no idea why they were seeing so many half century old automobiles as they drove along was just part of the game.

First place in the Bridgehampton Grand Prix was Richard Weintraub (driver) and Gerard Jeffrey (Navigator) in a 1955 MG TF. Second place went to Alain Baume and Jack Libaire in a 1955 Mercedes 190sl, third went to James Thorp and Steven Jury in a 1962 Porsche 356 and fourth went to Richard Lisman and Clive Doyhle in a 1936 Lagonda Rapid.

Sunday, after a breakfast under the tent, the cars were driven onto the property and lined up for an inspection and judging, which would include blue, red or white ribbons in a wide variety of categories such as Best Under the Hood, Best Hot Rod, Best European Sports Car, Best Paint Job and Best Interior. Also Best in Show.

I was asked to judge Best Paint Job, and I walked around looking for scratches and rust, and at one point had a conversation with a young woman dressed in an original Corriege mini-length dress from 1971. Her name was Claire Beirhorst, and she had her thick black hair piled high on her head, black eyeliner and lipstick and little strings of wooden beads for earrings. She was dressed to match the very year that the Volvo 1800E she came with was made. I had my picture taken with her and the car.

I also got to meet, standing by their Lazzarino, so named for the man who designed and built it in Argentina in the 1950s, Jonathan and Jake Auerbach, the driver and navigator, who are father and son in real life and who most recently competed in a cross country rally called The Great Race. This was a 4,200-mile journey that crisscrossed the country from Philadelphia to San Francisco, recreating a famous race that had taken place in 1908. The rules of that race were that cars had to be at least 45 years old. And that was the only rule. The cars left Philadelphia in early June, and it took the entrants about two weeks to complete the journey. One hundred and two started. Eighty-four finished.

Stony Brook Southampton

A New Day Dawns on the College Campus in Southampton

By Alan-Michael Braveman

There is a new sign on Tuckahoe Road in Southampton that simply proclaims, "Stony Brook Southampton."

It is startling in its simplicity. The sign combines the new logo and name for the much-beleaguered campus. The new logo for the Southampton college campus is brilliant in its design as it is evocative of the wind, ocean waves and a blue night sky over the campus.

This crystallizes the new identity of the campus and at the same time announces its revitalization. The much-anticipated departure of Long Island University from the Southampton campus has finally taking place. LIU now has in its possession a New York State check for $35 million from the sale of the campus. It will help LIU to plug the holes in their coffers and support their recent "BBB-rated NY state dormitory authority bond issue that reflects this self same $35 million as an increase in their endowment," according to Standard & Poor's rating service.

Granted, LIU will have a continued but minimal presence on the campus for a short period of time but eventually all they will have left in Southampton will be a radio signal. The rest of their academic endeavors on the East End will have been relegated to a single rented building in Riverhead.

At the October 4 ceremonial sign changing, Dr. Shirley Strum Kenny, President of Stony Brook, said "We have been chomping at the bit and have been ready to go. Now we finally can, it is ours. There are so many buildings that have been left empty and unused for almost two years now and they are really in need of help. We have to get more of the buildings in shape than are viable now to make the campus usable and we have to finish the Library; that is our first task. That building is our first priority and then the dormitories and the other buildings. We have to get this campus up and running for the future, and the future is here

JUDGE RULES AGAINST MONTAUK CAR FERRY PLAN

By David Stoll

A federal judge for the Eastern District of New York has upheld East Hampton Town's ban on high speed ferries. The ruling, disappointing Montauk's Viking Fleet companies, was the second to uphold the Town's law. The same judge, Hon. Sandra J. Feuerstein, had ruled against Orient Point's Cross Sound Ferry at the end of last year in a similar case. Both rulings accepted the Township's rationale for the high-speed ban and a similar ban against ferries that can carry cars, namely to avoid worsening the area's already heavy traffic.

Viking has long offered summer service for passengers without cars between Montauk, New York and Block Island, Rhode Island. The trip takes about two hours. As configured, the new 120-foot Viking Superstar boat, with its four 600-hp engines, could make the trip in 40 minutes by running at 30 knots. During the 2006 summer season, while the lawsuit was pending, Viking agreed to operate the boat at a speed of just under 20 knots, allowing for a one-hour trip. The Superstar is authorized by the Coast Guard to carry only 150 at this time, although the actual capacity is much greater. The boat also has bunks for overnight winter fishing voyages in Florida.

The Viking Superstar does not take cars on the Block Island route, but Viking would like to offer a high-speed ferry service for passengers with cars between Montauk and New London. Cross Island Ferry, too, wants to tap that market, and sought to set up a hub in Montauk. Both companies sued the Town to overturn the bans preventing them from operating ferries with 2,000-HP or more or otherwise capable of running at speeds of higher than 20 knots, as well as ferries that can carry cars. As of now, Viking is the only ferry operator in East Hampton.

and now. Today..... Finally we can hang up the signs, unlock the gates and let fresh air blow its way across the campus as we roll up our sleeves and go to work."

State Assemblyman Fred Thiele Jr., was beaming from ear to ear as he described this as a "wonderful day, one that was long anticipated and welcomed by everyone involved. Stony Brook can now get on with the business of creating a great campus here in Southampton. This is what we all wanted and it has finally happened."

Howard Seifert, the Vice President of the Southampton College Alumni Association, said, "I can't believe it, what an amazing turn of events after two years of turmoil and anguish."

Joan Tutt, a director of the SAVE organization as well as a member of the Southampton College Alumni Board, said "I can hardly believe it, finally..... Hooray... what a great day."

Jimmy Buffett at his All for the Sea concert

A group of Suffolk County Legislators and local officials were present at the sign changing on Tuckahoe Road and all echoed a positive, upbeat theme. They were unanimous in their generous words of praise about the event and the final transfer of the property after a long two years filled with uncertainty and angst. The changing of the ownership and new focus of the campus cannot but instill a great sense of excitement into all the East End communities. Stony Brook University will bring excellence in education as well as excitement to this area was the common sentiment.

The former Southampton College Chancellor, Robert F.X Sillerman, pledged at the final Southampton college graduation ceremony two years ago that the "Best College Library on any campus in America would be finished and that every graduate would always find a welcome on the Southampton Campus no matter what it was called." It looks like his pledge will come true. It is also hoped that he can be enticed to bring back the "All for the Sea Concerts" that were so much part and parcel of the summer season in Southampton and raised millions of dollars for the Marine Science Center and its students.

Harry Marmion, the former President of Southampton College, whose words of rebuke for LIU's President aroused the energy of thousands of alumni and friends of Southampton College and help found the group SAVE, said he was "simply delighted that all the hard work had finally paid off and there would be no McMansions and that it was all finally over."

As promised by Dr. Shirley Strum Kenny the opening " Blast " has been scheduled for Oct 14th from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. with a Dixie Land Band, a Jazz Trio, Food ,Wine tasting and a grand celebratory picnic on the lawn behind Chancellors Hall. Everyone in the community is invited. There is no charge. It is a party, a celebration of things to come.

Store and Schoolhouse Changes in Sagg and Wainscott

By Christian McLean

The phrase "South of the Highway" carries connotations of elitism and seclusion from the rest of the East End communities. While this term has become as much a real estate marketing term and a quest of social climbers as anything else, the truth about living in the stretch of land south of the highway between Mecox Bay and Georgica Pond is not as much of social segregation as one of a separation of time.

If you head toward the ocean on Sagg Main you will see Sagaponack's one room school which teaches fewer than a dozen students. The concept of this type of academic institution seems absurd by today's standards and educating such a small group of students in isolation from the surrounding neighborhoods (i.e. Bridgehampton, Wainscott, East Hampton) seems to reaffirm the elitism that the area is stigmatized with, even if the desire for this educational experience is actually simply a matter of location and circumstance. As old and awkward a prospect as the one-room school house must be, the Sagg General Store is equally anchored in the history of the Village. The building, which shares space with the post office, has been a meeting place for centuries.

Further along on the heritage trail south of the highway, only two miles east, on the corner of Town Line Road and Main Street, Wainscott's one room school house stands, a testament to Wainscott's old-time way of life.

The quaintness of these three buildings, the only three public institutions in this 30 square mile community, is one of the reasons why these areas are so coveted and the economic backing behind the Village and hamlet supplies enough to preserve this small town way of life. But what is the place of one-room schools and general stores in the 21st century?

Sagaponack had to open its enrollment to students outside the district this year for the

BIG CHANGES AT WESTHAMPTON PERFORMING ARTS

By Dan Rattiner

The Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center announced this past week that they will be expanding their facilities. Sometime in late October, they will be purchasing a commercial property directly behind the theatre building that up until now has housed a barber shop and residence. This property has its own access from Sunset Avenue, separate from the main entrance of the WBPAC on Main Street in Westhampton Beach. This "back entrance," once the renovations are completed, will be for members of the staff and also for an expanded Children's Arts program. Basically, children from the nearby schools, and almost a quarter million of them have already come to enjoy the educational programs at WHBPAC since the place was founded in 1997, will be entering the theatre from this entrance to enable them to pass through all the backstage and support facilities before coming upon the stage, dressing room, theatre seating and lobbies where they will be going to or performing in the shows.

WHBPAC was founded by some civic minded citizens in the mid 1990s, after the local movie theatre chain pulled out of what was truly a classic, 1930s era movie theatre of 300 seats. The facility was vacant for a while, but then the purchase took place and WHBPAC opened its doors nine years ago. They had a huge mortgage, lots of hopes and dreams and a big theatre. Let's put on a show, was the rallying cry.

Since that time, the programs at the theatre, both in number and quality, have grown dramatically. The biggest audiences ever came to their nearly one hundred programs offered on stage during the year. The mortgage is burned. And the purchase of the million dollar downtown barber shop property in the back was done with cash. The business office and sup-

Nancy Grigor Of Hamptons Locations

Linney while they shot exterior scenes for the upcoming Nanny Diaries at the Kennedy House in East Hampton, a late 1880s house and one of Grigor's favorite locations.

By Renée Donlon

To walk onto the back deck of Nancy Grigor's home is to understand why art directors covet the Hamptons to sell movies and tablecloths alike. Dune grass gracefully sweeps from the deck to the beach below. Atlantic waves pound the shore before washing back to where a blue horizon blends into blue sky. The perfect backdrop for a Martha Stewart table setting. Or a poignantly stark scene from Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind. Grigor's home has been location to both.

But Grigor has opened more East End homes than just her own to film and photo crews. The former model and actress, and current resident of Amagansett, is the owner and president of Hamptons Locations, an East End location scouting and production company. With roughly 500 locations on the North and South Forks, Grigor can find an art director, photographer, or filmmaker the perfect setting in which to shoot his movie, TV commercial, catalogue, or magazine cover. She even found Robert Downey Jr. a venue when the frantic groom-to-be called her with just four days to find a new wedding location. Ironic, considering Grigor never intended to do weddings. "When I started I said 'no weddings' the way cleaning women say 'no windows.'" Yet, years later, Grigor found herself taking Downey Jr. on a tour around the Amagansett house that would be the site of his nuptials and the Billy Joel and Sting concert that followed. "In the end, it's all about finding a good location," said Grigor.

The locations, mainly houses, are arranged on her website in categories such as "modern," "barn," and even "southwest," which came in handy when Martha Stewart magazine needed pickup shots after an Arizona photo shoot.

The website, in addition to listing hundreds of photos of hundreds of houses, also includes a place for homeowners to volunteer their houses as possible locations. There is no shortage of volunteers. There are two reasons. The first is that owners can earn, on average, between $2,500 and $3,500 per day, depending on the number of crewmembers involved in the shoot. The second is that they get a chance to watch movie stars being photographed on their living room sofa.

Celebrities are often on set at Grigor's locations. Around Memorial Day, Grigor met Scarlett Johansson, Paul Giamatti, and Laura Linney while they shot exterior scenes for the upcoming Nanny Diaries at the Kennedy House in East Hampton, a late 1880s house and one of Grigor's favorite locations.

She even found Robert Downey Jr. a venue when the frantic groom-to-be called her with just four days to find a new wedding location.

Most recently, Grigor hung out with Nicole Kidman and Jack Black during filming for Noah Baumbach's The Squid and the Whale, a project in Hampton Bays and Quogue. Grigor and Black were already acquainted from the Premiere magazine shoot done on the beach behind Grigor's house. Grigor showed photos of Black wearing an old-fashion, one-piece swimsuit on the sand below her deck.

While Black was funny, Grigor says, Jim Carrey was funnier. Grigor took pity on Carrey who was filming on the 20-degree beach behind her house, inviting him inside to do his hair and make-up. Grigor showed off a photo of the two of them standing in front of the large mermaid statue in her living room.

Yet, the photo Grigor loves the most is the one of her and her "favorite of all time," Richard Gere, outside one of her "barn" locations. "I made all my girlfriends jealous," laughs Grigor.

In addition to movie stars, Grigor also runs into many of the photographers and models she knew from her own modeling days. She now finds locations for local photographer Tony Lattari, who once shot her for the cover of Butternick Patterns, and for Patrick Demarchelier, who shot Christie Brinkley in a health bar ad at a Grigor location. Coming full circle, Grigor has done 4 to 5 jobs with Brinkley, whose bathing suit line she once modeled.

It is her modeling past that makes Grigor a skilled location scout. "Being in front of the camera made me know what to look for behind it," explains Grigor as she displays a series of Maximillian Furs ads she did. She points past the smoldering images of herself in massive furs to classic movie themed backgrounds. She notes how the windows, furniture, and room tell a story. "I paid attention to all that. It was the equivalent of a college education, and I took all that and applied it to my business," says Grigor. Knowing the importance of lighting from her photo shoot days, Grigor is careful to photograph her locations from every angle. She photographs east and west sides of a house so the photographer can see what the light is like at sunrise and sunset, popular times to shoot. For each house, she has dozens of photos documenting every detail that could inform a director, even which way the doors open.

This understanding of setting's role in film or photo shot developed during an extensive modeling career both here and abroad. Under the Ford Agency, Grigor modeled for Bill Blass, Versace, and others. She was even a "Halstonette" for American design Halston. Modeling eventually sent her to Paris, then on to Germany where Grigor's desire to explore blossomed. Wanting to experience the country

TWENTYSOMETHING... By David Lion Rattiner

Demolition Man

They are thinking about making it illegal to use the cooking oil that McDonald's French fries and almost every other fried fast food product is cooked in. The reason is because this particular cooking oil is called partially hydrogenated cooking oil, which is, I guess, really bad for you. My buddy, Jim Rice, who is getting his masters at Brown University for chemical engineering, did his thesis on this particular subject at Northeastern University when I was in school with him. He managed to squeeze out 25 pages of jibber jabber which basically said, if you eat too much of this, you die. Jim is a very smart guy. I on the other hand, will eat a cell phone if you deep-fry it.

We all know that it is illegal to smoke in bars and we also know that Arnold Schwarzenegger is the governor of California. None of us ever thought we'd see this today, except for a couple of screenwriters from Hollywood.

I hate to be the guy that says this, but the guys that wrote the movie Demolition Man with Wesley Snipes, Sandra Bullock and Sylvester Stallone back in 1993 had some pretty impressive foresight. If you saw the movie, you may remember that in the movie Arnold Schwarzenegger is the President of the United States, all fast food is completely illegal except for Taco Bell, which dramatically changed its menu to meet the requirements of the future, and cigarettes are completely illegal. The writers of this movie, Daniel Waters, Robert Reneau and Peter M. Lenkov, should go into Wall Street and start predicting the future on stocks.

The movie also suggests that in the future, cursing will be illegal and that instead of using toilet paper in the bathroom, you use three seashells. However, the movie does not explain how those seashells are to be used. Which is good, because to be honest, I really don't want to know.

If you haven't figured it out already, I'm a movie guy. I'm not a TV guy, although I have to say, people start to go bananas when they talk about their shows, "Desperate Housewives," "Lost," "Nip/Tuck" or "Prison Break." They start jumping up and down when they talk about it. You don't see that with the movies lately. Maybe it's because they are making movies like Wicker Man.

The movies are what it is all about for me. In fact, I can't even imagine what the heck I would do with myself if there weren't movies. I'd be very bored with my life. It is because of movies that I can relate to a character when doing something. For example, I am James Bond when I order a martini, I'm Rocky when I go jogging, I try to be like Forrest Gump in almost every aspect of who he is and my car is the Batmobile. It is just the way things are. I don't relate to Spiderman, because it's just not realistic.

Recently however, movies have been kind of terrible. In fact, last week was the first time in my life where I seriously considered asking for my money back because the movie was so bad. And it was a Nicholas Cage movie, too. I'm talking about the guy in The Rock! Do not go see Wicker Man. I seriously would rather have looked at a chimpanzee chewing bubble gum for two hours than watch this movie. I would rather have spent two hours playing with my cell phone ring tones, deciding which ring tone best fits my own personality. I would rather have stared at a microwave oven for two hours. I love Nicholas Cage, he was so awesome in The Rock, but this movie was just "Oh my God this is the worst movie I have ever seen." The thing that really bothered me about seeing this was that a friend recommended that I see it because her friend said it was good. Just having a two distant connection with a person who liked Wicker Man felt weird to me.

The best movie that I saw this year was Snakes On A Plane, and that movie was supposed to be terrible. But you knew that going in. It embraced its terribleness, which made it a good movie.

The Hamptons Film Festival is exciting to me for two reasons. The first is that it gives you something to get excited about in the fall in the Hamptons and the second reason is because it increases my chances of the casting director for the next James Bond film to see me and then chase me down the street and beg me to be the next James Bond. I'd casually tell him that I was interested and he'd invite me for a drink and I'd order mine from the bartender like this, "I'll have a Vodka martini. Shaken. Not stirred."

first time. It was a strategic attempt to attract parents who were interested in having their children study in what seems (to many) to be an antiquated system. Now Wainscott is facing the same challenge of boosting attendance and looks toward an open enrollment for next year's school year. Where the outside world may see teaching children from kindergarteners to third grade in the same room as a regression in the educational system, it is probably because they are picturing "Little House on the Prairie" and not a modern school with computers and advancements in technology. As a testament to a "simpler" way of life, there is still a desire for this close-knit educational mode, though most parents in the area opt to send their children to larger schools (Bridgehampton and East Hampton) or private institutions (Ross School and Hayground) for their education. This trend away from the one room doesn't seem to frighten the administration in the Wainscott school district and, in fact, they are planning on building a new school, adjacent to the current school with all the modern conveniences of a conventional school, coupled with alternative programming such as a student run farm which Dominic Annacone, school superintendent, believes will attract more students away from the generic school system.

The quest to maintain some degree of tradition on the East End seems to always be at odds with "progress." And even the historic structures and ways of life must be tailored to meet the needs and desires of the 21st century. The Sagg General Store has received a facelift and a good deal of interior renovations in order to meet current building codes. The schools open their enrollment to outside students and small town living pushes on for another year.

The doors to the Sagg General Store are now open and another traditional way of life South of the Highway has returned. If only they could tear down the spec-houses and start planting potatoes again, then there'd be some real progress into the past.

as deeply as she could, Grigor rented an Opal and traveled the country before eventually following the collection shows south to Milan.

After living in Milan for some time, she returned to New York City. Then, in 1979, her accountant urged her to buy her first home in Southampton. Waking up on her first morning of visiting the Little Fresh Pond property she was touring, she was struck by a sunset that reminded her of those from her Pennsylvania childhood. She bought the house with money she earned from seven national TV commercials she did with director Steve Horn, who was responsible for the first Virginia Slims print ads.

Seven years later, and eager for an ocean view, Grigor moved to her current home in Amagansett. Her photo editor friends were also eager for ocean views. They began using Grigor's home for shoots with such frequency that Grigor decided to make a business out of it. Ever since then she has been finding directors, photographers, and, yes, even brides, a picture perfect piece of the East End to make their film, their magazine, their wedding that much more "Hamptons."

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #419
Things You Do Once and Never Again

In the beginning, it's just learning not to stick your finger in a socket. As we grow, the list of things we do once and never again grows too.

Never ask your husband to pick up hair color for you. I did this once. I asked for medium auburn, I got Midnight black. I finally figured out that all hair color products are labeled with coded wording that men cannot decipher. Only women understand that words like, "Burnished Sunset" means medium auburn.

Never ask your husband to pick up feminine products for you. I did this once. I asked for a specific product. I got hemorrhoid cream. Since these items were on the same aisle, I assume he thought that something resembling a tube of caulk would be a better solution.

Never send your wife into a hardware store to get little things. We can identify a weed wacker, but we cannot identify different sizes of nails, screws and washers and all that little stuff. Yelling at us will not make us understand it any more than us yelling at you will help you understand hair colors.

Never take a child into a toy store unless you intend to get them something. If you don't get them a toy, they will tantrum to the point that someone will become convinced you are kidnapping them and call the police. At that point, you can confess that you just found the kid wandering around in the store and you're not his parent, in which case you go free and leave the kid for CPS. Or, you can say that you are the parent and that they were just having a tantrum, in which case they make you leave and take the screaming kid with you.

When you were young, you could jump into a pile of autumn leaves and it really didn't bother you when your butt slammed to the ground. After forty, you can still jump into a pile of leaves and slam down on your butt, but you will only do it once.

Everyone has a personal blood alcohol level that trips the lever in their brain where all the strange ideas live. Halloween is coming. Do not trip that lever while trying to carve a pumpkin. My uncles did it many times, because once wasn't enough for them, and we always had "Picasso pumpkins" because nobody could figure out what they were supposed to be.

Never bring a hearing impaired friend or relative to a movie. I said.....NEVER BRING A HEARING IMPAIRED FRIEND TO THE MOVIES.

If your child needs some pediatric over-the-counter medicine, either go get it yourself or call the pharmacy and have the items ready for pickup for your hubby. If you send him with this list: Tylenol Pediatric Cold Formula, Vick's Vapor rub, Pediatric Robitussin D Cherry flavor; you will get....aspirin. And you will hear, "What? It's all the same thing."

Never take a toddler to a crowded event, like a fair, without observing the 'Twofer Rule': You need two adults fer every one toddler. Toddlers always break away and if they see any open area, they run for it. It takes one adult running straight for them and one adult to sneak up on their flank to catch the little darlings.

I am convinced that as we age, we value quality sleep as much as good nutrition or exercise for our well-being. With that in mind, always choose a mattress together. Never trust your partner to make the best choice for you. I made this mistake once and slept on a board for ten years. His back will win out over your back every time! And if you like a soft bed and he likes to sleep on a concrete slab, get twin mattresses, push them together, and give him visitation rights – but only if he earns them, of course.

I don't care what the women's magazines say, do not surprise your hubby at the door wrapped in saran wrap, wearing only a smile, or covered in scented oil. Without fail that is the one day he will show up with either his brother or his boss. I do have a personal story here, but I have shoved into the corner of my mind labeled, "First things to go when I get Alzheimer's" and I notice as time goes by, I seem to have more and more memories on that wait list...

There are many things we do once and never again. I've begun to think that wisdom is just a bad experience with a really positive spin.

The disputes with the Town arise from laws passed in 1997 following a major transportation study in 1995. East Hampton concluded, based on the 1995 study, that allowing high-speed ferries and car ferries would "substantially worsen the already bad traffic situation." Of particular concern was increased traffic associated with potential runs between Montauk and New London, which is the gateway for the Connecticut casinos. The 1997 law prohibits high-speed ferries and car ferries from docking anywhere within the Township.

The Cross Island and Viking lawsuits put forth similar claims, although interestingly, the Cross Island suit was supported by the Towns of Suffolk and Shelter Island, both of which see traffic from South Fork drivers who are taking the Orient Point ferry to Connecticut. Given Judge Feuerstein's ruling against the Cross Island parties, last week's ruling against Viking was not unexpected.

The lawsuits pit two constitutional doctrines against one another. Under the United States Constitution, Congress is given certain powers, while all others, including most local matters such as zoning, remain with the states and localities. East Hampton argued in these lawsuits that its ferry bans represents the exercise of its classic zoning powers over traffic and related concerns, such as pollution and economic vitality.

At the same time, Congress has the power to regulate commerce between the states, and the courts have long ruled that this power contains a mirror-image ban on any state's effort to put a block on interstate commerce. At its most basic, this means that New York cannot impose tariffs against Connecticut or Rhode Island goods, nor could New York prevent people from traveling to or from other states. Cross Island and Viking argued that the Town of East Hampton is restricting interstate commerce and travel by banning high-speed and car ferries. They asserted that East Hampton's motivation was isolationist.

Judge Feuerstein, who has been a federal judge since 2003 and before that was a judge in district and state courts for 16 years, disagreed with the ferry operators in both lawsuits. She concluded that East Hampton's traffic-related justifications were appropriate, and its decision to ban certain types of ferries was a reasonable effort to prevent additional traffic and its associated negative effects. In supporting the Town's approach, she ruled that although people have the right to travel between states, they do not have a constitutional right to a particular means of travel, such as via high-speed ferry. Convenience is not part of the right to travel.

Judge Feuerstein's decision also rejected as unfounded a claim by Viking that a high-speed ferry service would help to improve traffic in East Hampton. In that regard, she pointed to the increase in traffic on the North Fork following Cross Sound Ferry's addition of high-speed service to Connecticut.

Cross Ferry has appealed the earlier decision against it. Viking's lawyer Steven Barshov, of Sive, Paget and Riesel, did not respond to a request for comment.

spread photographs from the 1800s on the wooden table where the coffee was, along with an original date book for the store from May of 1895. One of the log entries in the book was 14 oz of cheese for 14 cents. For that month, total revenues for the store was $120. "I wonder if that was good month," Karen jokes.

The history of the Sagg General Store is remarkable. Built more than a century ago in 1878, the store was owned and operated by Thaddeus S. Edwards. In 1898 it became the Hildreth and Co. General Store and was owned by Thomas Hildreth. Somewhere in there, the entire building was picked up and turned around. Now the back faced the front. And now the Post Office service was separated from the store. Store on one side. Post Office on the other. In 1900, Thomas enlarged the building and it was then handed over to W. Leland Hildreth in 1922. "He was my Grandfather," Richard Thayer tells me at the store over a cup of Kobricks Coffee, the brand that the store now sells. The coffee is a fourth generation coffee company out of the city just like the Thayers are.

In 1948, the store experienced a fire and the roof burned. Karen noticed pieces of the roof upstairs when they were renovating the building and she couldn't throw them away. "I decided to paint the word Sagaponack on the old wood and sell them for $20. People think I'm crazy for selling them so cheap. I may rethink that."

After WWII, W. Leland Hildreth's son came back from Europe and took over the store. Back then molasses and cheddar cheese wheels along with pitchforks and horse equipment was where the real revenue for the store came from. The store then stayed in the family until the early 80s, where it was rented to Jen Hildreth, who ran it for five years. Then the store went outside the family and was rented to Don and Mary Spellman and then to Bob and Barbara Baugh, who swapped places with the Post Office on the other side, and kept it running until last year. Now, the Thayers have it back after the lease ended last year, and the couple has spent nearly every day since then renovating the place. Richard, who has been in construction a good part of his life and who also went to architectural design school in college, redesigned the store and aggressively renovated it, making everything perfect.

Originally they thought to just paint the store and redo the floors, but along the way, they kept finding bits of history here and there and simply had to put in the effort to return it to the store. One such piece of history, other than the original boards of the building that are hand painted with the word Sagaponack on them, is a mail sorter, also known as a kiln, that stands at the entrance. "That was the original kiln from the Post Office," says Karen with excitement.

And it is the little details like that which make the Sagg General store such a special place to be. Other renovations to the store are new, slab heated floors, a new roof, extensive basement repair, new equipment for cooking all picked by the Thayers, and a completely new design. The chef is Lori Hurley of East Hampton and, of course, the food and baked good are all fabulous, all made in the kitchen with the freshest ingredients.

The next generation for the store is already in place as well. The Thayers have three daughters, Mimi, Lindsey and Kasey. Lindsey is a teacher while Mimi is still in school, studying Studio Art and History at Coastal Carolina University, and has an interest in working at the store. Kasey, who is currently a bookkeeper at the 1770s House, is also planning on working at the store.

Even during the short time that I was speaking with the Thayers, customer after customer would walk up to the store to see if it was open, to which Karen would smile and let them know that it would be open the next day. "I really want this the store to be a place where people can come in even just to say hello and catch up. I saw two people run into each other here that live in the same building in New York City and never once actually met one another. It's that kind of thing that I really hope will happen at the store," Karen says.

All of the pieces are now in place. All of the coffee is stocked, the kitchen is ready, the employees are bustling and hustling and the shelves are filled with homemade cookies and baked goods. And now, after much anticipation and even sadness from their loyal customers who have been going through Sagg General Store withdrawal during the renovation (this writer has experienced such a withdrawal) the Sagg General Store is back and all of us are very happy that it is.

20 Years Ago In Dan's Papers

The Multi-Colored Beach Stickers of New Hebrides

Sept. 9 1976

By Dan Rattiner

When New York tourists go out to get parking stickers in the summertime, they quickly discover the remarkable confusion that is our local government in the Hamptons. Parking at the beach in Southampton will require a Southampton Village parking sticker, unless the beach is not in the Village proper, but just in the Township. Then the sticker has to come from Southampton Township. There are parking stickers for East Hampton Village, for Westhampton Beach Village, for Quogue Village, for East Hampton Township and if you live in Sag Harbor, it depends which side of Main Street you live on. Those on the east side require East Hampton Township stickers, those on the west side require Southampton Town stickers. No wonder the summerpeople get confused.

But if the summerpeople get confused about our local government, at least they can take some consolation in the fact that the Hamptons are not the New Hebrides. Government in this island archipelago has gotten so complicated that people don't know whether they are coming or going.

You really do know about the New Hebrides. These are the islands in the South Pacific where the natives occasionally daub red paint on their chests to spell out "U. S. A.," put bamboo poles over their shoulders and march down to the sea to wait the arrival of John Frum. The natives have a wonderful memory of World War II, and if you ask them about it, they'll tell you about it and John Frum. John Frum was a black American G. I., a cousin to Franklin D. Roosevelt, and when he came to the New Hebrides, he came bearing jeeps, chocolate, chewing gum and cooking utensils. The natives say he will come back some day and, to encourage him, they write U. S. A. on their chests and march down to the sea. Some day this little trick will result in his return.

So you do know about the New Hebrides because you've heard this story before. What you haven't heard is that the New Hebrides are ruled by three separate and distinct governments. And there may be a fourth in the making. And they all rule, peacefully, in the same place at the same time. It is far worse than the Hamptons.

The thing is that neither the English nor the French ever wanted to take over the New Hebrides and make them into a colony. But settlers from both France and England were on the islands, and the islands occupied a sort of no-man's land between the English and the French colonies in the South Pacific. Under the circumstances, in 1906, the English and the French agreed to administer the islands jointly, and wrote up a protocol to that effect. It has never quite worked out. Beside the fact that the English and French don't speak the same language, they don't agree on very much either. As a result, the British Foreign Office has set up its own police force to rival that of the French Department of Overseas Territories. There is a French prison and an English prison, a French school system and an English school system, and a French Government building and an English Government building. When it was discovered recently that the flagpole on the French building was three feet higher than that on the English building, the French were politely asked to lower their flag and just as politely sent up a man to trim down the pole.

There are not two sets of laws in the New Hebrides, however; there are three. There are the English laws to be obeyed, the French laws, and then the laws set up by a combination of English and French governors known as the Condominium Government laws. Nobody seems to mind. But now they are talking about setting up still a fourth governmental body on the island. The English and French have agreed on a new constitution for the New Hebrides which calls for the election of a representative assembly of the natives. This election, scheduled for next year, is supposed to be the first step down the road toward Independence, which seems to be something that will relieve just about everybody. In the meantime, however, the assembly is bound to pass its own laws on the islands, leading to still more confusion than before.

The mess involving our local beach stickers, therefore, is not quite so complicated as the mess they've got on New Hebrides islands. On the other hand, I thought I saw one of our local merchants wandering around on the beach last month, the letters N. Y. C. painted on his chest. Now what could that mean?

Lower Mortgage Payments by 45%

With Sophisticated Jumbo Loan Program

NY - Mortgages for multi million dollar homes is typically limited to 50% financing, carries a higher rate and requires full income verification.

A scarcely known loan is available for home purchases and refinances that offers up to 90% financing, cuts monthly payments by as much as 45% and requires no income verification. Additionally there are enhanced tax and pre-payment advantages with increased cash flow not available with other mortgages. Many wonder why they haven't been informed about this unique loan. One reason is this loan does not profit lenders in the same way other loans do so they're not easy to find.

The company sponsoring these programs, North Atlantic Mortgage Corp., has made a Free report "Sophisticated Jumbo Financing" available. This report also addresses many other unique types of mortgages, credit issues, and most importantly how to get a great Jumbo loan with no income or asset verification.

If you are self-employed, professional or high-income individual, there are many other savvy "secrets" and various loan options that you probably aren't aware that exist.

"We got such wonderful welcomes along the way," said Jonathan Auerbach. "We just loved all the small towns. We were the biggest thing that happened to them all year."

"Best adventure?" I asked.

"Every day was an adventure. But we made it," son Jake said.

"What a bonding experience," I said. "At the end, you either love or hate each other."

Jonathan works on Wall Street and his son is a senior in high school. They live in Manhattan and Bridgehampton.

"It was really very interesting in one regard," said Jonathan. "The driver has to go wherever the navigator says he has to. That's the rule. So I had to follow my son's direction wherever he sent me."

At the end of my tour walking around, much of it in the rain, I realized that there were many cars that had good paint jobs, but really only two cars that had equally perfect paint jobs. They were a green 1929 Packard Saloon owned by Sam Guillory, and a bright red hotrod owned and entered by the Auerbachs. How do you give an award for a tie? I asked somebody.

"You have to choose. But the Packard gets dozens of ribbons and is already in as Best in Show, I've heard. I'd choose the hot rod." And so I chose the Auerbach's bright red 1938 Ford. And the Packard got second.

Further down the line, standing in the rain, a man named Greg Johnston was demonstrating the turning signal, something called a "traffica-tor," built into his 1957 Bentley S1 Sedan. Listening were a young family standing by the front passenger door. Umbrellas were out.

"I just press this button and BINGO. Out it pops."

From the side of the car, just behind the passenger door, a little three inch long bar suddenly flipped out from a spot where it had until that moment lain flush with the trim. It pointed. It had a little red light on the end. Now he could turn.

"Back then, people signaled turns by pointing with their left arm out the driver's window. Straight out meant you were going left. Arm bent at the elbow and the forearm straight up meant you were turning right. This was a great advance.

"Sure is," the father said.

"Is there one on the other door?" a ten-year-old asked.

"Of course."

Story of the Dog
Cambodian and American Puppet Theater
Tuesday, October 10, 2006, 7:00 pm, Wang Theatre

Cambodians say there are four types of endings: a tear, a drop of blood, happiness, or a question. Which will it be? So begins the Story of the Dog.

The world-renowned rod puppetry of Vermont's Sandglass Theater combines with Sovanna Phum's Cambodian dance and traditional shadow puppets to tell an old Cambodian folk tale about how war transforms good people. A soldier marches off to war leaving behind his young wife and dog. Abject loneliness forces her to resort to desperate measures. Illicit passion, a cruel murder, a vengeful ghost, and the loyal dog. How does it end? This collaboration of Western and Eastern traditions tells this cautionary tale through stunning imagery, movement, and live music.

Tickets: $10 for students and seniors, $15 for general admission
Also suitable for middle and high school students.

Reservations highly recommended. Please reserve your tickets by E-mailing wangcenter@stonybrook.edu or call (631) 632-4400.

port group for WHBPAC will move from the main theatre on Main Street into the building in the back. And this will open up the main theatre this autumn and winter to some of the education programs, many of which will expand, particularly those for children.

The program for this fall for children includes School Day Performances, a program called KidStage, and live performances for the entire family. School children from the entire East End region will be attending these programs, either to watch them or participate. They include poetry, musicals and dance performances — with troupes traveling in from Ghana, Mexico, China and everywhere in-between. Ticket prices will remain $8 per person. The stage is often the venue for school plays and musicals brought over for the big stage. There are workshops for both students and teachers. And there are numerous shows, both professional and not.

This weekend, for example, after Grammy Award-winning musician Jimmy Webb performs on stage on Saturday night October 7, there is the next day a performance called

"Thwak" for children performed by a group called the Umbilical Brothers. The show involves vocal ingenuity, physical skill, mayhem, mime and live audio-acrobatics. Shows are at 3 p.m. and 7.

There is Jam-a-Rama on November 4, which is billed basically as a rock and roll show for 2 year olds and up.

A group from the Netherlands who call themselves Theater Terra will perform Little Donkey on November 9 at 10 a.m. and 12:30 p.m.

The curtain goes up on A Garfield Christmas at 3 p.m. and then again at 7 p.m. on Friday, November 24, with Garfield singing, dancing and wisecracking his way through numerous Christmas entertainments.

The Snow Dragon, which is performed by the Tall Stories Theatre Company from the United Kingdom comes on stage on Friday December 1 at 10 a.m and 12:30 p.m. It's about a Billy goat named, of course, Billy, and his quest for more presents for Christmas courtesy of the mythical Snow Dragon.

Other programs this fall include Aaron Neville of the Neville Brothers on October 14, Taj Mahal on October 24, and the legendary Broadway musical singer Barbara Cook on November 25. •

HOME SALES AT 'THE HIGHLANDS' ON LONG ISLAND'S NORTH FORK OUTPACE THOSE IN OTHER MARKETS

Value, Quality, Location and Layouts Cited as Reasons for Buying in Two New Luxury Communities

AQUEBOGUE, N.Y., Oct. 1, 2006 – The Highlands at Reeves and The Highlands at Aquebogue, two new single-family communities by homebuilder Westminster Communities on the western end of Long Island's prestigious North Fork, are experiencing a surge in buyers, despite the general downturn in housing sales in the New York metropolitan area. In fact, these luxurious homes are selling at an even faster pace this year than last.

"This community has presented a great value since day one," said Jack O'Donnell, who is representing the exclusive broker for The Highlands. "People are absolutely amazed at the design and the pricing."

The Highlands at Reeves, which will include 60 single-family homes, is located adjacent to the scenic Cherry Creek Golf Course. The Highlands at Aquebogue, which borders the picturesque Long Island National Golf Club, will feature 79 residences. Each community offers three- and four-bedroom models with up to 3,300 square feet of living space. Amenities include a neighborhood clubhouse, swimming pool, tennis courts, beautifully landscaped grounds and several pristine ponds. Residents also benefit from landscaping and snow removal services.

Approximately 40 percent of the homes, designed by the award-winning architectural firm of Axelrod & Cherveny of Commack, Long Island, have already been sold. Phase Four has recently opened wonderful building lots overlooking ponds and the golf course or over farm fields. "The few remaining lots in previous phases have held at earlier pricing and are excellent values"

"The dramatic high ceilings, the ground-floor master bedroom suites, and the amazing views are just some of the features that buyers cite as having won them over," said O'Donnell. "The homeowner's association is another plus. It means people don't have to worry about cutting their lawns; they can swim in a pool, play on the tennis court, without having to maintain them; and they have a clubhouse. Combine all that with a price point in the low $500,000s, and people are impressed. The whole package really takes them by surprise."

O'Donnell explained that the communities' high visibility, just off Sound Avenue – the main east-west artery on the North Fork – has helped to draw people in. "Many come just out of curiosity or because they think they may want to move at some unspecified time in the future. But they are so impressed by what they see that they decide to push their plans forward and buy now."

According to O'Donnell, the buyers come from all over the New York metropolitan region. "We have some from northern New Jersey and many from western Nassau County. We also have several buyers from The Hamptons and North Fork who are taking advantage of the increased equity in their existing homes to buy a brand new house here at The Highlands."

The Highlands North Fork location is a strong selling point. Long celebrated by artists, fishermen and wealthy vacationers, the area's pastoral beauty remains dotted with farms, villages, vineyards and stately mansions. The Highlands is also within easy reach of the Long Island Expressway, the Hamptons, and Long Island Sound's magnificent beaches. Boutiques, fine dining, wineries, parks and theaters abound. "We are seeing an increasing number of inquiries from people who have tired of the crowds and traffic in the Hamptons. They want a quieter setting, but one that still enables them to take advantage of all that this area has to offer."

Some buyers are using The Highlands as a second home. "They can go down to Florida or elsewhere in the winter, knowing that their property here on Long Island will be secure and well maintained during their absence."

The fact that these homes are being built by Westminster Communities, which has a 50-year history as a developer in the Northeast, has also helped sales. "Westminster's reputation gives buyers a sense of security. Our on-site sales associates truly believe in the homes they offer, and people feel confident not only in the community, but also in what is behind it all. They see the huge investment that Westminster is making in the landscaping and that they are building the clubhouse even before all the homes are sold. They know that promises will be kept. In fact, one buyer was so impressed that he decided to become one of our sales associates."

There are several model homes now open for viewing at The Highlands. The sales office, located on Sound Avenue, is open daily from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Feel free to call us at 631-722-5900 or visit our website, www.highlandseastend.com.

Westminster Communities is a diversified homebuilder in the Northeast, with more than 50 years of experience in residential construction. Headquartered in Florham Park, New Jersey, the company's current projects are primarily focused in New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania. These range from large mixed-use redevelopment projects in communities such as Perth Amboy, Asbury Park, Cranford and Atlantic City, New Jersey, to deluxe townhomes, condominiums, single-family luxury homes, apartment complexes, and active adult rental and for-sale communities.

Dan's North Fork

World War II And Greenport

Greenport Hosts Author Who Talks About Her Experience In Germany

By Phyllis Lombardi

There are quite a few of us here on the North Fork. Those of us old enough to remember firsthand the photographs and stories of Allied troops liberating Europe's concentration/extermination camps at the tail end of World War II some times are reminded of such times. Indeed, some North Forkers were among those liberators. And those liberated.

Dachau, Auschwitz, Treblinka. We read about them all in the New York Daily News, for example, then only a few pennies a copy. Now, more than 60 years later, those photographs and stories remain vivid in our minds, painful in our hearts.

Why then would quite a few of us here on the North Fork choose to go indoors on a splendid September Sunday afternoon to hear this grief once again? Perhaps because this time the terror ends in triumph.

The setting was Greenport's Peconic Landing and the guest speaker was Barbara Lovenheim, author of "Survival in the Shadows: Seven Jews Hidden in Hitler's Berlin."

Ms. Lovenheim had traveled to Greenport from her Manhattan home at the request of Ellen Zimmerman, president of North Fork Reform Synagogue in Cutchogue. It was a journey much appreciated by the North Fork audience.

For Ms. Lovenheim told of another frightful time that brought forth the best in some Berliners as had the Twin Towers attack brought forth greatness in New Yorkers. Most of us, said the author, think of WWII Berlin as empty of Jews. Not so. In 1943 there were more than 4,000 Jews in hiding in Berlin. Of these, about 1,400 were alive at the end of the war in the spring of 1945.

Lovenhein's story is about seven of those surviving Jews. Seven who came to the United States at the end of the war. Lovenheim was able to interview four of the seven and the result, after considerable research, is a videotape that is heartening and a book that has won praise in England, Germany, and now the U.S.

I'll add that Lovenheim was accompanied by John Grimes, an ABC news correspondent. He read passages from the book – and the beauty of his reading was surpassed only by the spirit of the Jews and the more than 50 non-Jewish Berliners who hid the seven for more than two years.

This North Fork audience, so far removed in space and time from the Third Reich rubble that was Berlin in the last years of the war, expressed surprise that so many Jews survived in that city. Had they not all been sent to the so-called work camps?

No, they had not. And Lovenheim introduced us to seven members of the Arndt, Lewinsky and Gumpel families who made up the largest known group of Jews to survive hiding in Berlin. As a further surprise to her North Fork audience, Lovenheim's story is not one of unrelieved horror, as WWII accounts so often are.

Her story is, instead, one filled with humor and courage. I guess that's the stuff of survival. Here's what we heard – we, the fortunate North Forkers gathered at Peconic Landing.

The group of seven was headed by Dr. Arthur Arndt who had served as a medic in the German army in WWI. With Dr. Arndt were his wife, his two young-adult children, and three friends. These seven were without ration cards, without identity cards, usually without jobs, and always relying on the help of others. Often Dr. Arndt's patients in pre-war Germany were the ones providing a room here, a closet there, during the war.

The group relied also on lying, disguise, even stealing. They had to "adopt the behavior of the enemy" if they were to live, said one of the children. Indeed, two of the young women dressed in the best clothes they could find and "crashed" a Stormtrooper Christmas party. They watched a show and ate the SS food. For food was the major concern. Starvation had reduced that 4,000 figure to 1,400.

Those young women frequently dressed as widows – black veils covering their faces did the job. Along with luck. One bit of that luck was owning a radio. They celebrated the Normandy invasion, the defeat at Stalingrad.

After the war, safe here in the U.S. (Queens and Hempstead), the seven survivors flourished. One worked as a nurse in New York City, another for CBS. Dr. Arndt served at the Hebrew Home for the Aged in New York City. On the videotape one of the seven wondered about their lives. "Where does one get the guts to do these things?"

As North Forkers left for home after a celebratory sip of wine in the Peconic Landing library, I suspect they were asking themselves the same question.

Drink Greek At Pindar Vineyards

Walk into any wine shop and you'll see rows of Pindar Vineyards wines lining the shelves. Long Island's largest producer, making over 60,000 cases annually enjoys the widest distribution and best name recognition of any local winery. They've also been around a long time by local industry standards. Dr. Herodotus "Dan" Damianos founded Pindar Vineyards back in 1979 and Dr. Dan and his three sons, Alex, Jason and Pindar still manage the operation, making it the oldest vineyard under continuous family ownership.

When you're making (and have to sell) 720,000 bottles of wine every year, you need to appeal to the masses and Pindar does that with sweet blended wines that are made by the lake full. Wines that fall into this category include their popular Winter White, Spring Splendor, Sweet Scarlet and Summer Blush wines. These aren't serious wines by any means, but they have their place, just not on my table.

Pindar's winemaker, Jason Damianos, also crafts a wide array of varietal wines, some unremarkable, some good and some much better than good. And most are respectable values, which isn't always the case with local wines.

I didn't get to taste Pindar's 2005 Johannisberg Riesling ($15) before it sold out, which speaks to its quality and popularity. I've enjoyed previous vintages immensely.

At $10, Pindar's 2004 Peacock Chardonnay represents a pretty good value. Production information isn't readily available, but my guess is that this wine was fermented in steel and then aged briefly in oak barrel. The nose offers clean pear, Golden Delicious apple and vanilla oak aromas. Simple, but flavorful on the palate, pear dominates with subtle pineapple notes. The acidity is intense — almost to point of tasting artificial — and makes this a wine best enjoyed with food.

Created specifically for Dr. Damianos, Pindar Vineyards' Pythagoras ($13) represents an excellent value in red wine. Medium garnet in the glass, this blend of cabernet sauvignon, cabernet franc, merlot, petit verdot and Malbec is a juicy table red that, again shines brightest with food. The nose is plummy with violets and musky notes. Fruity and low tannin, this non-vintage blend is medium bodied with plum, blackberry and black pepper notes. Juicy and with terrific acidity, this is a nice everyday option.

Damianos' 2001 Merlot ($15) has a slightly sweet nose with plum, prune and black cherry aromas and sugary oak notes. Fruity and low tannin, it offers more plum and some blueberry flavors, but the oak is a bit raw for my taste. 2001 is well known as a tremendous vintage on Long Island, but wines from 2000 offer impressive quality as well. More delicate and elegant than the bold 2001s, Pindar offers two 2000s worth noting.

The Pindar 2000 Merlot Reserve ($19) offers an initial sniff that is dominated by toasty oak, but subsequent ones filled my nose with vanilla, raspberries and plums. On the palate, softly gripping, dusty tannins frame an elegant but robust wine with fruit flavors balanced by hints of cigar box.

Pindar's 2000 Mythology ($30) is a fine red that one might not expect to find at a winery so popular with the white zinfandel crowd. This medium crimson wine has a layered nose of black cherry, black currant and black plum that is accented by subtle, but discernable, tobacco undertones. 31-percent cabernet sauvignon, 24-percent merlot, 22-percent cabernet franc, 12-percent Malbec and 11-perent petit verdot, this is Pythagoras' big brother in many ways. Much fuller bodied and more complex, it displays layers of dark fruit with tobacco, vanilla and oak. The tannins are very well integrated, gripping only slightly and while the finish could be a bit longer, this is a well balanced wine.

Suffolk Community College Plans A Culinary Arts And Hospitality Center

By Silvia Lehrer

As a member of the culinary arts advisory board of Suffolk County Community College, I had the distinct pleasure of attending the groundbreaking, ceremony on September 21, for the projected Culinary Arts and Hospitality Center to be located in Riverhead, New York.

Master of ceremonies George Gatta, Vice President of Workforce & Economic Development for the college, welcomed the team of dignitaries and was there to acknowledge the support the college received from Riverhead community leaders headed by Chamber of Commerce President Tom Lennon and their recognition and efforts necessary for the project to proceed. At the ceremony, Dr. Shirley Robinson Pippins, President of Suffolk County Community College, joined state and local officials to mark the beginning of construction on the college's 28,000 square foot state of the art facility.

The Culinary Arts and Hospitality Center is being constructed by the Parr Organization and when completed in September of '07 it will allow up to 188 students to enroll full-time in the growing program. The new building is considered a key component in the revitalization of downtown Riverhead.

Significant financial support was made possible by our State and County elected officials. The dignitaries included New York State Senator Kenneth LaValle, and without being asked, stepped forward with a grant of $250,000 seed money to help equip the culinary labs. Mr. Gatta thanked Senator LaValle for his years of support for higher education in New York State. A strong advocate of the project is presiding officer of the Suffolk County Legislature Bill Lindsay who helped secure $330,000 to equip and furnish the Center. When Assemblyman Marc Alessi, one of the newest members of the New York Assembly, won office, his #1 priority was higher education. When apprised of the capital needs of both the College and the Culinary Arts Center he saw this as an opportunity to revitalize downtown Riverhead. A smart move, he thought, "the farms, the wineries and the upscale restaurants that prevail on the North Fork opens up more opportunity for agro tourism".

Tom Lennon

Mr. Alessi also secured funds for culinary equipment and then, as part of a wrap-up budget bill, he and his colleagues provided an additional $200,000, part of which will be used to establish a nursing laboratory on the second floor of the building. For the first time the college will be able to offer nursing courses as part of their Eastern Campus Academic offerings. A "win-win situation," echoed Suffolk County Executive Steve Levy, who reiterated just how important the project could be for the entire community.

The Culinary Arts program has been operating at full capacity under the direction of Richard Freilich, Culinary Arts Program Director of SCCC, during which time the College had to turn away qualified applicants due to space constraints of its existing instructional facilities. The new Center will enable the Culinary Arts Program to increase enrollment from 50 to 188 full-time students over a four-year period. Richard deserves great acclaim for his energy, passion and tireless efforts to set this project in motion.

Some of the functional areas included in the new facility is a Culinary Arts Laboratory with stations for 16 students, Baking and Pastry Arts Laboratory with stations for 20 students, a 60-seat demonstration theatre/lecture hall with full instructor kitchen, brick oven and integrated instructional technology, a nursing lab, student study area and a retail bakery/caféé with prep and serving areas to be operated by the students.

At the ceremony, Dr. Pippin stated, "The opening of the Culinary Arts and Hospitality Center gives us yet another opportunity to demonstrate our value to the community we serve. Not only will this building serve as a catalyst for downtown revitalization, our prominent location will serve to attract visitors to the area who will then patronize other local attractions and retail establishments. This was truly an energizing experience and I look forward with great expectations to the new Culinary Arts and Hospitality Center in Riverhead.

The North Fork On Television Has Soul

Brent Sterling Captures The North Fork And Turns It Into A Television Show

By Phyllis Lombardi

Hey, did you see me on television? Channel 21, a few nights ago. Well, not me, really, but where I live and what they think I'm all about. The half-hour show titled "The Souls of New York: North Fork" presented both our delicate finger of land and the hardy souls who live and work here.

Except that creator/producer Brent Sterling Nemetz never stopped at my house to photograph my morning glories or interview me about my soul. Now I know my morning glories are very special. About my soul? Judgment rests elsewhere.

As for the television show, I'll tell you that a review of it said, "Quiet denizens of the North Fork." Right there I have a problem. That word "denizens." Kinda creepy, don't you think? Like that monster Grendel we read about long ago. And "quiet?" Well, I'm not quiet (ask my husband) and my neighbors certainly aren't (ask me).

So with those two little irritants out of the way, we can proceed to the good stuff. And that good stuff flows from two somewhat contradictory words – motion and serenity. For the work done on the North Fork may be time consuming, demanding, difficult, sometimes dangerous. But the North Fork worker is able to achieve a serenity that seems to come with field and farm, water and wind.

Meet Jim King, Mattituck lobsterman. I like this guy. Even after years out on Long Island Sound, years that have seen a shrinking lobster harvest, Jim maintains his sense of humor. He says he gets a kick out of pulling up the lobster trap. "You never know what's going to be in it," he says. Then he adds that Long Island lobsters are often shipped north and sold as Maine lobsters.

Back on shore, Nemetz takes us to the Crescent Duck Farm in Aquebogue. The Corwin family welcomes the hatching of 20,000 baby ducks a week. A week! I had to phone the place to verify that. You see that many little fuzzies running around and you've got motion, I'd say. The ducklings seemed so small, especially when photographed alongside Doug Corwin's feet. Maybe Doug has really big feet. That's a question I didn't ask on the phone. What makes Doug smile serenely? When the ducks are "healthy, happy, and quacking at you."

From thousands of little quackers, we move on to 60 really big residents of the North Fork. They're the American Plains bison (buffalo) raised by Ed Tuccio on his North Quarter Farm in Riverhead. These buffs are strong, says Ed, and fast. They jump fences, too. Ed's put up two fences around his acreage – just to be sure. The buffalo meat is served in Ed's Riverhead eatery, Tweeds Restaurant and Buffalo Bar.

Also consumed on the North Fork are Martin and Carol Sidor's North Fork Potato Chips. Cutchogue farmers, the Sidors began their delicious new chip venture a couple of years ago. Watch those machines peel and slice those North Fork potatoes. More in minutes than my knife and I could accomplish in a month! Carol's quite convincing – just the way she said "thicker, crispier" made me want to reach for a chip. And when she said, "We produce what we're proud of," I wanted to shake her hand.

I'd like to shake hands with members of the Baiz family, too. They're in motion all calendar long. Their Old Field Vineyard in Southold requires winter pruning, the vines must be netted over (pesky birds) in August, and on and on.

Nature is, said Rosamond Phelps Baiz "a constant challenge." Always there are the variables. But the grape, singly or in clusters, is a sphere of beauty, a source of satisfaction.

Come indoors now. Meet Greenport's David Nyce who produces custom furniture. There's motion aplenty in this man's life – from large cuts to hand-sanding. David finds serenity even in his creative excitement. Trees are like people, he says, each with unique beauty. His job is to offer that beauty in his work. Of hand-sanding, he says, "You sand your fingerprints off." I'll add that Dave's print appears to go into each piece he creates.

Thank you, Mr. Nemetz, for this TV look at our North Fork. It's quite possible you've given away the secret, the secret of our North Fork serenity. To put our best selves in motion.

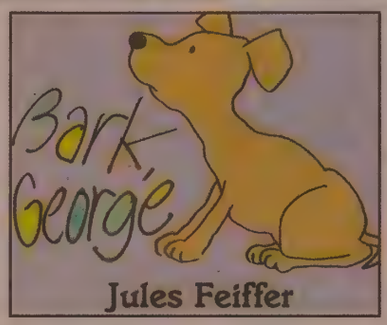
When In Manhattan... BY OLIVER PETERSON

Jules Feiffer

I hate to leave you without a thing to do this weekend, but with Halloween and some other things coming up this month we're going ahead to late October. The event that's grabbed my attention has turned out to be an interesting collision of elements from my educational life. I found it in the School of Visual Arts alumni magazine, or maybe it was one of their e-mails. Jules Feiffer, esteemed professor at my other, now non-existent grad-school alma mater, Southampton College, will be speaking at the School of Visual Arts on Thursday, October 26. If you don't know of Jules Feiffer, the man is above all things a social satirist, but for him that comes in many forms. His political cartoons had a 41-year run in the Village Voice and won him a Pulitzer. His playwriting has won him numerous awards. His most notable play, Little Murders, was made into a film and he wrote the screenplay for, among others, Carnal Knowledge, directed by Mike Nichols and starring Jack Nicholson and Art Garfunkel. In 1961 Feiffer won an Academy Award for his animated short, Munro. Heck, he wrote the screenplay for Popeye starring Robin Williams – I didn't know that before researching this article and I had a class with the man.

Feiffer is focusing mainly on writing and illustrating children's books these days. He's not a young man, and this speaking appearance is to fall in conjunction with "The Masters Series: Jules Feiffer," an annual award exhibition held at the Visual Arts Museum that will provide an in-depth retrospective of his 50-year career. The show will include works on paper, watercolors, cartoon strips, illustrations, and posters from film and stage productions. His latest book, The Long Chalkboard and Other Stories (Pantheon) written by his wife, Jenny Allen, and illustrated by Feiffer hits shelves on the 10th of this month, and Mr. Feiffer will be signing copies at the close of his lecture. There will also be a catalogue available with an interview by noted design authority Steven Heller. Heller is the chair of the School of Visual Arts MFA Design Department and the author or editor of over 70 books on graphic design.



I can say with authority that when he made it to class Jules Feiffer was an engaging professor with a breadth of experience from which to learn. His class "Humor and Truth" at Southampton College was always fun and delved into ideas of what is funny and how to accomplish humor in a simple way. My best example of this is our first assignment. He asked that we bring in something funny we had recently read. I, like some others in the class, tried to be impressive and brought in a piece by David Foster Wallace that described a famous writer lying by the pool, fat and reading crappy magazines in the hot sun. Jules just wanted a simple joke. A "Why did the chicken cross the road" kind of thing. I felt stupid, but he had a point. It was a refreshing break from what had become the MFA standard of literary pretense. To me this anecdote sums up Jules Feiffer – he gets to the meat of what is funny and absurd without all the noise and posturing that young writers often attempt to produce. His sparse drawings are also reflective of this.

My experiences at both the School of Visual Arts and Southampton College were positive. Jules Feiffer added a nice lesson and helped develop another piece of my varied education. If you like art or writing or both, it would be a wise decision to go see his show and hear him speak. Maybe even buy his new book. Definitely buy the catalogue. A show like this won't be coming around again for a long time, and though he makes his way to the Hamptons regularly, you might not get an opportunity to meet and hear this accomplished man anytime in the near future.

The Jules Feiffer Lecture and Book Signing are on Thursday, October 26, 6:30 p.m. at 209 East 23 Street in the 3rd floor, Amphitheater. "The Masters Series: Jules Feiffer," is on view at the Visual Arts Museum from October 24 – December 2. The show and lecture are free and open to the public.

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

It is necessary to make a few comments about the debacle that's going on in Detroit. Recently, virtually all of the major car companies in America announced that they are losing billions of dollars. Frankly, they deserve it, because they have turned a blind eye to the rise in gasoline prices and our dependence on foreign oil. The accusations presented in Bob Woodward's new book, State of Denial, might be applied to Detroit's marketing practices and product development for the last decade.

And Asian automakers should not be let off the hook either. They too have been building amazingly large, gas-hungry vehicles. The one vehicle that sums up the whole mess is the super-sized SUV called "the Armada." Stupid name for a stupid oversize vehicle that has to be sold, even with the temporarily lower gas prices, to stupid people.

The Armada

Years ago, when gas was forty cents a gallon, Americans were buying small economy cars. Of course, the most famous of them all is the ubiquitous Volkswagen Beetle. I'm not talking about the overly cute, current VW, but the original, strange-looking air-cooled one that was introduced around 1949. Boy, was that thing popular. Why? It broke through social barriers, it was actually cool to be seen in one, and it was a bargain; because, for around $1,600, there was no better car to be had. It was considered to be an intelligent purchase by many.

Part of the Beetle's success was that it really was an ingenious design. Most of you know by now that it was designed by one of the most prolific car designers of the twentieth century, Dr. Ferdinand Porsche, the same automotive guru who brought us the Porsche sports car. In fact, the first Porsches were thinly disguised Volkswagen Beetles. It was this combination of post-war German technology and German reconstruction mentality that produced the Volkswagen Beetle.

Surprisingly, one still sees old Volkswagen Beetles on the road, and they are still being made in Mexico. Imagine, a sixty-year-old design still in production. In fact, the air-cooled engine is also being sold as an experimental aircraft engine in modified form and is currently being produced by several companies here in the United States. By more than coincidence, the Volkswagen engine bears a strong resemblance to a Lycoming or Continental aircraft engine used in virtually every small plane in the air.

Perhaps Detroit can learn from this success story. What we really need now are many VW Beetle-type cars, strongly built, smaller cars that get excellent gas mileage.

America has to be weaned off its thirst for oversized cars. Many years ago, I wrote an article lamenting the passing of giant cars of the twenties and thirties, like the dual-cowl Duesenbergs, large Packard jump-seat eight-passenger sedans, and, the granddaddy of them all, the Bugatti Royale. I wrote that we would never see the likes of them again, referring mainly to their large proportions. Well, I was wrong. They are here in the likes of the Armada, clogging our highways, and burning more fuel per passenger-mile than some passenger jets.

Small cars are great to drive. Part of the success of the early Volks was that they were fun to drive. Paul Newman, when he was a young actor, used to blast around Connecticut in his Porsche-powered VW Beetle. This was a common and easy conversion to make in the fifties; you could bolt a four-cylinder Porsche engine into a Beetle in twenty minutes. A used Porsche engine was expensive in those days, selling for around $750, almost as much as a secondhand Volkswagen.

Why do you think sports cars are small? They handle better and are more enjoyable driving machines. Incidentally, they all happen to get pretty good gas mileage. I also consider them to be much safer than larger cars. Why? Their better maneuverability and generally superior stopping power make them safer. Get this fact through your heads; it is not the size of a vehicle that matters, but its ability to avoid accidents that makes it safer. An SUV, or any heavy, large vehicle, will end up on its roof during an emergency maneuver way before a smaller, lighter vehicle will. Big, top-heavy vehicles are highway clumsy, period. They also get lousy gas mileage. To me, driving a large, heavy car is analogous to cigarette smoking. Why do people buy crazy-expensive packs of cigarettes knowing that the cigarettes will eventually kill them? If you drive an SUV and smoke, you must really have a death wish.

This may sound like an advertisement, but millions of Europeans can't be wrong. All they drive over there are small, well-built cars that get good gas mileage. They also take five-week-long holidays; maybe they're on to something. For years, American car manufacturers have been touting European handling and all that stuff in their ads. What are they trying to imply? Maybe Detroit should build and sell more European-type cars and be smart, save gas and save lives all at the same time.

JUST FOR KIDS

EAST END KID:
JAKE THE PHILHARMONIC DOG

BY EMILY HART POST
WITH A LITTLE HELP FROM KATLEAN DE MONCHY AND DAVID POST

Karen LeFrak had a book party at Avery Fisher Hall for her new book for kids called Jake the Philharmonic Dog. She told me that it is about a dog that loves music and now I am reading it. The party had lots of kids and adults from New York and Southampton. My favorite part was when I saw this beautiful large dog with an older boy and he told me that his dog, Bomber, was a greyhound like the racing greyhounds. Bomber was a retired racer who Adam LeFrak (I think his name was Adam?) rescued and it became his dog. I played with Bomber for a long time and even fed him. He was so sweet. You can rescue a greyhound too – there are places in the Hamptons that do this. You can go to the Long Island Greyhound Transfer's website at www.ligreyhound.org to learn more about how to rescue a greyhound. I am working on my dad to get us a greyhound. I also liked the peanut butter and jelly sandwiches shaped liked dogs.

JUST FOR KIDS

Winging It

On September seventeenth, a teacher in East Moriches counted over one hundred Monarch butterflies flying through the sky above her head. This sighting confirms that the Monarchs have begun their treacherous and exciting annual journey from Canada to the pine forests of Mexico. Lucky for us, the Hamptons are one of the many stops they will make along the way!

The Monarchs' flight path follows the milkweed plant, which grows in specific places across North America. Milkweed is the Monarch's favorite food, resting place and nursery, so it is important that Monarchs find milkweed plants wherever they go. One journey from Canada to Mexico can be as long as 3,100 miles, and the Monarchs must travel an average of fifty miles per day in order to get to Mexico before winter. Monarchs encounter all sorts of danger on their trip, from rainstorms and freezing cold weather to speeding cars and exhaustion. Many butterflies do not make it through an entire journey, and only a few have been able to make the complete loop to Mexico and back. Luckily, the butterflies' entire life cycle only takes six weeks from egg to butterfly, so in the spring many young Monarchs join the migration their parents and grandparents began months before, flying to a place they have never been. One Monarch, tagged by Donald A. Davis in Ontario, Canada, in 1988, was found flying in Austin, Texas in 1989; that means that not only did he make it all the way from Canada to Mexico, but that he also made it half of the way back the next year.

When the butterflies migrate to Mexico in the fall, they concentrate on getting south as quickly as possible, but when they fly from Mexico to Canada in the spring, the butterflies stop to mate and lay eggs along the way.

Monarchs will only lay their eggs on Milkweed plants, which are poisonous to many species of animal, to protect the eggs from being eaten by mistake. In about two weeks, the yellow, black and white striped caterpillars are born. They eat so much Milkweed that their bodies absorb the plant's toxins and the caterpillars become poisonous themselves. Their predators know that they are poisonous because of their bright colors; most brightly colored insects are either poisonous or taste terrible. After two weeks of being a caterpillar, the baby Monarchs hang upside-down to make their pupas, also known as a cocoons or chrysalis. It only takes a baby Monarch a few hours to build the bright green chrysalis where they will spend the next couple of weeks transforming into a beautiful Monarch butterfly. Once the adult butterfly hatches, it hangs onto the empty cocoon and fills the veins in its wings with blood that it has stored in its body for just this purpose. When its wings are fully inflated, the butterfly flies away to begin its journey north for the summer.

Once the young Monarch hatches, it will join its parents and grandparents on their journey North, spend the summer in Canada, and then start flying South, eventually landing on the East End for a rest along the way.

If you see any migrating Monarchs this week, watch them closely. Monarch butterflies cannot fly when the temperature drops below 55 degrees, which is why they are diurnal (they sleep at night and fly during the day). In order for them to fly quickly and easily, however, their bodies must be significantly warmer than the air. In September, most butterflies you see are either basking in the sun with their wings open or shivering to keep warm. Just like shivering raises our bodies' temperatures by creating heat through movement, shivering raises the butterflies' bodies' temperatures, too. And the deep orange color of their wings and dark black lines attract and hold heat from the sun, which gives them enough energy to fly in the cooler East End weather. By November, the Monarchs will begin to arrive in the pine forests of Oyamel, Mexico, where they will rest and eat all winter long, preparing for their journey north.

If you would like to learn more about this year's Monarch migration, and track their progress from Canada to Mexico, visit www.learner.org/jnorth/fall2006.

Full Cotton T-Shirt

Take Pride. In the current climate of our divided nation, that beautiful and simple phrase is full of meaning. Patrick Gray and John Betz chose those words as the name of their T-shirt manufacturing company from which they offer nine images that honor American soldiers fighting in Iraq and Afghanistan. Carefully constructed not as a political statement but as a show of support for the individuals who are sacrificing so much, the T-shirts tell the stories of servicemen and servicewomen in their own words, with pictures representing a specific moment from their personal experiences on the front lines.

"We wanted a way to show our support of the men and women who are giving so much every day, without choosing sides or making a statement about the larger issues of the wars," said Gray.

To that end, he and Betz, a former Marine, collected journal entries, diary passages and quotes from soldiers that in a very moving way serve to bring the big picture down to a more intimate size. On the website, where you can purchase a T-shirt for $22, there is a bio and background accompanying each design, so that the wearer knows in detail the inspiration behind it.

"Operation Phantom Fury" depicts a pilot and three fighter jets detailed in charcoal on a navy blue background. The design was inspired by Mike Bridges, a Marine who was part of the air cover that supported ground fighters who reclaimed Fallujah during some of the fiercest fighting in the war to date. A very personal viewpoint of a very public moment in the world's history, the words of victory read "Fallujah 2004." It is full of energy and movement and in it I can see the beauty of flying as well as the dangerous power of the aircraft.

The "American GI" shirt was inspired by similarly-wrought images from WWII, which, according to the website, "gave a face to America's greatest generation." It shows Matt McClennan, a Marine described as a "tattooed, serial rule-breaker." This image, to me, highlights the toughness that we expect, that we barely consider, that we take for granted in our soldiers.

The newest design is an asphalt grey T-shirt that carries the image of US Infantry Captain Mike Keilty shaking hands with a young Iraqi boy. The words below read "The Spirit Abides." To me, this moment in time underscores the complexity of the mission of our soldiers, and the extraordinary humanitarian situation in which they find themselves.

And that is the point. Not only do the soldiers share some of their most evocative memories, but those of us who are fortunate to receive them via the artistry of Take Pride will have our own interpretations and bring our own meanings to the images, in the same way we might react to any art.

In fact, it is the appeal to younger generations that makes takepride.com such a success. The T-shirts are accessible, well-designed and look cool. They bring forth awareness without solemnity and offer a modern way to stand in solidarity with our military, minus a cumbersome discussion of "for or against" the wars.

Gray is eloquent and passionate in speaking about the mission of his company, and the stories he shared with me gave me goosebumps. As emotional as I am about war in general, I don't have any personal connection to anyone who is fighting for our country right now. But I feel that takepride.com brought me very close to our military heroes and in spite of my anti-war stance, I am currently deciding which T-shirt I will wear.

Take a moment and click on takepride.com to see the selection and read the stories. The hand-screened t-shirts are all cotton, and each has the Take Pride logo on the back. Plans are underway to sell the shirts in retail locations, and twenty percent of the sales proceeds go to military-related charities.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

MICHAEL KNIGIN AT GOODFRIEND PARK

Exhibition space has taken many forms in the Hamptons, as a previous "Art Commentary" series suggested, including restaurants, banks, and insurance companies. Yet venues also exist in large industrial-type buildings, like the structures on Plank Road, off Route 114 towards Sag Harbor. While the art may be good, the space is, unfortunately, somewhat sterile, the works becoming a commodity.

Yet there are exceptions: Michael Knigin's current show at The Studio and Gallery at Goodfriend Park presents a different image. While it is situated in a contemporary, wood building, the surrounding grove is welcoming and refreshing. The structure's interior is similarly fresh and minimal.

Mr. Knigin's work is shown to good advantage in such a place, considering that his art is not minimal but full of startling, often confrontational images and bold colors. His themes are just as daring. Simply put, his pieces are like fireworks, exploding in all their glory.

(Is it no wonder then that fireworks is the subject of one of Mr. Knigin's series?)

Metaphors continue to play a part in Mr. Knigin's

Work by Michael Knigin

oeuvre, particularly the juxtaposition between images. Such juxtapositions make political statements: images of a Vietnam soldier next to an image of a baby doll's head is one example.

Another work makes a philosophical statement: the juxtaposition of a classical statue's head with a nude woman's torso. Thus, icons are objectified.

Mr. Knigin's connections between ideas extend to yet another realm. For example, his bold and beautiful flower floating in the sky, a distant star in the background, nature on earth and in the cosmos.

Another interpretation: the temporary (flower) and the permanent (star). Certainly, that appears the theme in Mr. Knigin's work featuring two iris blossoms set before an exploding mountain-like shape (perhaps a volcano).

That Mr. Knigin's art gives rise to multiple interpretations is one of its strongest qualities, besides the sheer beauty of the imagery. A second arresting aspect is the artist's recurring motifs including flowers, moon and stars, both classical and popular icons.

Even so, there are metaphysical motifs as well, perhaps more subtle than what meets the eye: the rise and fall of life's events; the fragility of being; the endurance of the human spirit.

Mr. Knigin's exhibition can be seen by appointment. Call 631-324-5550.

Honoring the Artist: Jay Gebhardt

The lure of the ocean has inspired many individuals, including this week's cover artist, Jay Gebhardt. While the water remained a primary passion over the years, other preoccupations and events came before Mr. Gebhardt's turning to art as a full-time profession. The following conversation chronicles such experiences.

Q: How did your love of the ocean come about? Did you grow up near the water?

A: Yes, in Massapequa Park. I have a real affinity for the ocean. I used to surf a lot where I lived; I also worked at Gosman's when I was young, living in Montauk for a summer. Over the years, I would rent a home here in the Hamptons, I particularly remember one in the Dunes of Amagansett.

Q: You mentioned that both your parents painted although they were not professional artists. But you didn't study art in college.

A: Right. I went to SUNY at Albany and majored in economics and history. I spent twenty years on Wall Street. But my interest remained about the ocean. I got into painting because it was another way to revisit the beauty of the Hamptons; I started taking lessons at the Art Barge.

Q: What other experiences motivated your painting?

A: I also took lessons at the National Academy in New York where I live. (I left Wall Street a few years ago, although I am still involved in the financial world.) One of my teachers was Wolf Kahn, who got me interested in color. He asked me to join him as a student when he went to Florence to teach a workshop. That was in 1998; I've taken a second workshop since then in Brugge.

Q: Describe that experience with Kahn. How did it change your art?

A: I learned to paint on site; I really respond to a sense of place. He also gave me permission to use the color green, for example, when he would tell other students doing landscapes that they couldn't use green. I learned to drop all formulas so that you can use the colors you need.

Q: That experience obviously impacted on your love of traveling and painting on site.

A: Yes, I travel all over the world, taking my easel with me; I've gone every summer for five years to Italy. I paint outdoors in Pennsylvania, too, near Lancaster where my parents live. And I travel to Bonaire, Venezuela, where there is an ancient volcano.

Q: What is it about that landscape which attracts you? It's a different setting altogether from the Hamptons.

A: I'm interested in the palm trees, where the sun is sitting on the palm leaves. I like the challenge of capturing the colors; I might paint leaves yellow instead of green. "Finding" colors is spontaneous and less tedious a process.

Q: How do you feel about your art now, what new directions might you want to pursue?

A: I'm painting, painting, painting, but I want to say something about the world, like the crisis in religion. But I'm more a happy painter. I've been told that my paintings are serene.

Q: So you'd like to be a painter more than anything else?

A: It's something that gives me tremendous joy. If I had a choice between being wealthy and glamorous and being poor and painting, I would be poor and painting.

Entertainment In Town

review: jay johnson: the two and only...by gordin & christiano

Broadway's newest star, Jay Johnson, is the talk of the town and in his one man show, The Two and Only, his 11 co-stars feature puppets, a vulture, a snake, a monkey, a nutcracker, a tennis ball, inanimate objects, and human caricatures, which Mr. Johnson brilliantly brings to life by giving them voice and personality. Mr. Johnson, a man many regard as the world's greatest living ventriloquist, is probably best known for his starring role as the schizophrenic Bob and Chuck in the cult 1970s comedy classic TV series "Soap." In his hilarious new show Johnson demonstrates his amazing art and why he deserves the vast accolades. His show is not exactly new, since Mr. Johnson premiered a very similar much acclaimed show off Broadway at the Atlantic Theatre in 2004. He was scheduled to take up residency at the Helen Hayes Theatre last season, but was bumped due to the extended successful run of Bridge and Tunnel. Now finally here we can shout for joy!

Johnson recounts a captivating tale as he chronicles his journey to Broadway that feels like destiny. Beginning with a little history on ventriloquism, he quickly moves into the specifics of his own story and his infatuation with the craft. Johnson grew up in Texas, where at age five, performing in a local show, he discovered the power of laughter, while riding a stick pony across the stage. He became fascinated with ventriloquism when he picked up a Jerry Mahoney doll belonging to his cousin. A doll his cousin thought was broken since it was supposed to talk, but didn't. When he was able to make the doll speak his cousin thought he had fixed it, and Johnson immediately had the family laughing.

Johnson is a regular guy with an engaging style that is easy to like. He details his early opportunities in Texas performing at local parties before turning professional as a teenager. He gained much experience working at theme parks in Texas and Georgia with Squeaky, his partner at the time that he had created from his cousin's doll, and together they did the same routine 918 times.

The poignancy of his story is grounded in the relationships he carved out along the way, often with his inanimate performing buddies, but especially with his mentor, Arthur Sieving, a master ventriloquist. At seventeen he managed to contact Mr. Sieving, who was living in retirement with Harry O'Shea, his performing doll, and persuaded him to carve a doll for him. This would be the start of their lifelong friendship and a relationship that would have a profound impact on Johnson, taking on the dynamics of a father/son mentorship that weaves a path through his tale, resonating with some of the evening's most moving moments.

In his show Johnson makes a tennis ball speak and a monkey called Darwin curse. His bird, named Nevermore, had the audience howling. Introducing him, Johnson said, "Don't be shocked by the crowd."

"I'm shocked you could draw a crowd," he retorted.

Johnson even brings life to a face he has just drawn, makes it sound as if someone is speaking from within a closed suitcase, makes voices sound as if they are far away or coming from the next room and he does it all without moving his lips. The performance will astound you for he is a talented actor and storyteller as well.

Much wisdom has gone into shaping the evening that has been simply directed by Murphy Cross and Paul Keppel who, together with Johnson, conceived the show. Although the evening is a laugh out loud riot, there are many affecting moments as well – a perfect place to spend time with the children in your life and the child in you. Johnson elevates the ancient craft to an art form, weaving a magic spell that will touch your heart and lift your spirit.

Jay Johnson: The Two and Only! opened at the Helen Hayes Theatre, 240 West 44th Street, on Thursday, September 28. For tickets call 212-239-6200, or visit www.telecharge.com or the box office.

HIGHLIGHTS

Columbus Day weekend brings much entertainment to the South Fork. Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center has Songwriters Hall of Famer Jimmy Webb on Saturday evening and the funny Umbilical Brothers for two shows on Sunday. Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre presents HBO comedy star Robert Wuhl on Saturday and Best Female Stand-Up Comedy winner Kathleen Madigan on Sunday. East Hampton's Guild Hall has South American comedian Saulo Garcia's one-man show El Insomnio Americano on Saturday. There are also several independent film screenings in Sag Harbor, East Hampton and Southampton this weekend.

Several local villages have fall celebrations this weekend. Southampton's harvest weekend starts tonight at the library with music and laughter from Eric Knight, then sidewalk sales on Saturday and Sunday (raindate Monday), "Taste of Southampton" specials at local restaurants, and a family circus day Sunday at the Parrish Art Museum. Westhampton Beach has an art show on the village green Saturday and Sunday with pianist Peter Martin Weiss and flutist/saxophonist Julie Bluestone performing both days from noon to 2 p.m. The Ross School's Bridgehampton campus on Butter Lane hosts the annual Potato Festival on Sunday, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. (all-natural foods, special potato dishes from local restaurants, children's games; free admission but donations are suggested). Sag Harbor stores have sidewalk sales on Sunday, and Bayberry Nursery in Amagansett holds the annual Giant Pumpkin Contest and Weigh-off on Sunday at noon. Some years, competitors have brought in pumpkins weighing more than 200 pounds.

The Hamptons International Film Festival's (October 18-22) schedule and tickets are now available online (www.hamptonsfilmfest.org), by telephone (1-866-HIFF-TIX) or at the box office (East Hampton Historical Society, 101 Main St., across from The Palm restaurant). The East Hampton Artists Studio Tour is this Saturday and Sunday. More than 20 studios will be open each day from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. for the self-guided tour. Meet the artists and purchase their work. Admission is $50 to the nonprofit Artists Alliance of East Hampton (sold at several local stores or call 631-324-2225) and it includes a cocktail party Saturday from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

THEATER and COMEDY

Bay Street Theatre's "Comedy Club" has two performers this weekend. On Saturday, Robert Wuhl is onstage at 8 p.m. He created and starred in two successful HBO series, Arli$$ and Assume the Position. He is an Emmy Award winner, a movie actor and known for his storytelling comedic style. On Sunday at 8 p.m., comedian Kathleen Madigan takes center stage. She has her own HBO comedy show, often guests on the late-night television shows and received the American Comedy Award's Best Female Stand-Up.

Tickets to both shows are $48 and can be purchased at the Sag Harbor box office after 11 a.m. (631-725-9500) or online at www.baystreet.org.

South American actor/comedian Saulo Garcia brings his one-man show of tragi-comic monologues about immigrants' experiences in the U.S., El Insomnio Americano, to the John Drew Theater, Guild Hall, East Hampton on Saturday at 8 p.m. The show is in Spanish and tickets ($35 & $45) are available by calling 866-811-4111 or (631) 903-3623.

The very funny and off-the-wall performing Umbilical Brothers bring their Off-Broadway show Thwak to the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Sunday. They will do their combination of mime, acrobatics, music and mayhem at 3 p.m. and 7 p.m. Tickets are $40 and $45 for adults, $15 and $20 for children 12 and under; reserve seats at the box office after noon (631-288-1500) or online at www.whbpac.org.

The Hampton Theatre Company presents Charles Busch's hit Broadway comedy The Tale of the Allergist's Wife beginning next Thursday evening at the Quogue Community Hall. Andrew Botsford plays the nice doctor husband, Frances Sherman is his neurotically funny wife, Mindy Washington portrays the very comic mother-in-law and Ali Hamdouchi is their Iraqi doorman. Performances are Thursday through Saturday evenings at 8 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. until October 29. Tickets are $20 adults, $18 seniors, $10 students; call (631) 653-8955 for reservations.

MUSIC

Music director and hilarious raconteur Eric Knight performs an evening of piano, laughter and music at Southampton's Rogers Memorial Library tonight at 7 p.m. "A Little Knight Music" is followed by a champagne and dessert reception. Tickets are $20 ($10 for friends of the library); call (631) 283-0774 ext. 523 for reservations.

Singer/pianist/composer Jimmy Webb takes the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center stage on Saturday at 8 p.m. Elected to the American Songwriters Hall of Fame and winner of multiple Grammy Awards for composing and orchestration, he is the composer of "Galveston," "By the Time I Get to Phoenix," "Wichita Lineman," "Up, Up and Away" and "MacArthur Park." His songs have been big hits for Glen Campbell, the Fifth Dimension, and Richard Harris, but he is a fine interpreter of his own music. Tickets ($35-$65) are sold at the box office after noon (631-288-1500) or online at www.whbpac.org.

Susan and Stephen Sanfilippo will present a concert of historic and traditional sea chanteys, "Songs of Fish-shape Paumanok," on Saturday, 3 p.m., at the Marine Museum on Bluff Rd., Amagansett (free admission). Composer Jane Leslie performs at the Montauk library on Sunday at 3 p.m. Her music combines popular and classical styles.

Recommended performers at local clubs and restaurants: Amagansett – Stephen Talkhouse (call 631-267-3117 for tickets) – renowned British reggae band Steel Pulse (Fri.); Estia Cantina – Brazilian-born, New York-based jazz bassist Nilson Matta and pianist Helio Alves (Fri. & Sat., call 267-6320); Montauk – Montauk Yacht Club (Fri. 3-7 p.m.), music weekends at Gurney's Inn; East Hampton – Turtle Crossing (Annie Morgan band Thurs., Mama Lee & friends Fri.), Maidstone Arms (Jane Hastay and Peter Weiss on Fri.), Babette's (pianist Paul Gene on Sat.); Sagaponack – wine/cheese/music 5 to 7 p.m. Thurs. at Wolffer Estate Vineyards; Bridgehampton – pop standards and soft jazz at Kipling's Fri. & Sat.; jazz brunch Sun. at World Pie; jazz Sun. eve at Pierre's; Southampton – music weekends at Lori's (75 Main St.) and Tugboats North Sea, jazz Sun. 4-7 p.m. at Southampton Inn; Hampton Bays – Edgewater; Westhampton Beach – music weekends at The Patio, Casa Basso (Sat.), Passionfish (calypso Thurs.), Westhampton Beach Steak House (Fri.-Sun.); Riverhead – Eastenders Coffee House (Thurs.-Mon.), Tweed's (Fri. & Sat.).

FILMS

There are four very different films showing at local venues tonight. The John Jermain library, Sag Harbor, presents the recent comedy Thank You for Smoking at 6:30 p.m. There is no admission charge, but arrive a few minutes early for a good seat. Southampton's Parrish Art Museum begins its fall international cinema series at 7 p.m. with the mystery Cache (France, 2005) starring Daniel Auteuil, Juliette Binoche and Annie Girardot ($5 Museum members, $8 guests). East Hampton's Pollock-Krasner House continues its "Artists on Film" series with sculptor John Chamberlain's choice tonight of Rustler's Rhapsody, a little-known satire of westerns and homosexuality; Chamberlain will briefly discuss the film with historian Dr. Marion Wohlberg Weiss (7 p.m.; $5 guests, $4 members). Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

All The King's Men

Picture this: The terrific 1949 film All The King's Men, made from Robert Penn Warren's indelible novel, has been remade with tons of money. It has color, a heavyweight cast and 56 years of added movie know-how. So? What's wrong with this picture? Everything! How can all that powerful stuff teeter, topple and splat like Humpty Dumpty? Perhaps as Warren's book of political greed reiterates, power corrupts.

It's all patterned on the Depression-era Louisiana governor Huey P. Long, a poor "hick" who rose as a crusader for other "hicks," the poor and disenfranchised, of whom there was a multitude at that time. His hammy showboating was only matched by his own raging grit. For quite some time, the novel's Willie Stark became synonymous with demagoguery. Like Long, Stark attacked the gas and oil barons, convincing his folksy following that the state's resources belonged to them and that meant us. Taking a lot upon himself and for himself, he carried so-called Big Government to dangerous heights of corruption. And mounted glorious monuments to himself as he produced progress with schools, hospitals, highways and bridges, all tainted by fat fingers, sticky with graft. As with Willie Stark, this current King's Men film's own over-ambitious, overwrought presumptions wring out the good it attempts to achieve.

Odd is the Clinton administration's James Carville's initiating this movie. Odd also, is the penchant of producers for casting Brits as U.S. southerners. The Royals here are Kate Winslet, Sir Anthony Hopkins and Jude Law who are miscast, misused and, more awfully, mistaken for dopes. They drawl, they mewl, they scream, and they diminish as they flounder. Only Hopkins manages to skip over the mire of a dreary "Peyton Place in the Bayou Swamps."

Oh, Lord-ee! Now, we come to the casting of Sean Penn as Willie. This excellent actor has taken on a role totally out of his ken. One of the best of the "internal" actors, he rants and raves in a dictatorial manner but who cares? The 1949 Stark, Broderick Crawford, was the big blowhard blusterer that won an Oscar. This adaptation portrays him more as a po' rube whose guile propels him to high exalted Kingfish. Penn's Willie Stark hasn't convinced himself that he is the monstrous tyrant we're told he is. How can he convince us? But let's give Mr. Penn a round of applause for taking another risk. Let us now give a loud raspberry denunciation to the director/producer Steve Zaillian. He also wrote the screenplay, a field where he has excelled (Schindler's List), but as a director? This story required a director with a fire down below such as a youthful Oliver Stone. Zaillian uses a heavy, heavy hand, but it's as unbelievable as Penn's shouting, it doesn't have a guts-based platform to denounce power-at-any-cost politicians who put private interests above honor. "Hardball" is a cute euphemism for a sports-loving constituency, but it is not a valid substitute for intelligent statesmanship or moviemaking.

This epic-obsessed movie has been delayed for close to a year before release for "tweaking." Oh, m'gosh! What must it have been like? The story meanders shapelessly and sags like a sleazy motel bed. Jude Law also sags as a dissolute news reporter and is the first to come on to Stark's staff. He also narrates. Taking up a lot of cubic feet in the staff offices is the new, industrial-size James Gandolfini as a back room politico. Patricia Clarkson is the Mary Matalin-like spin doctor. Jude Law's reporter's fine aristocratic lineage includes Gulf swimming with Ms. Winslet's lovin' vamp, while her principled brother, Mark Ruffalo, broods (throughout the pic). Important, in Law's past, is the righteously correct (he is a judge) Anthony Hopkins who's been like a father to Jude and will again rise to importance.

You will hear a lot of yakking about morals, but on-screen it's as nebulous as character dimension and the "girls" Stark visits. The writer/director drapes a heavy sentimental veil over anything that might shock either side of the political divide – a big mistake for a movie so obviously made for Oscar time. Just because the 1949 King's Men won Oscars for Best Picture, Best Actor and Best Supporting Actress, it's not catching like measles. One has to get it the old fashioned way – by earning it. Robert Rossen's '49 film had the depth of intellect. It didn't rely on the jingoism of theatrical schtick and power plays used by political leaders to clobber the public into submission. I can't see Academy members bowing – except for accolades.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals. Sarah Halsey assists him.

MINI – MOVIE REVIEWS

The Departed

Martin Scorsese's on familiar territory here with this epic tale of the battle between the police and the Irish mafia in Boston. It's all very Boys Own Adventure with a strong line in honor and justice, mouthed out by a cast boasting Leonardo DiCaprio, Jack Nicholson, Martin Sheen and Matt Damon to name but a few. Not for everyone but very polished for what it is.

Employee of the Month

The continual fame of the utterly talentless and charmless Jessica Simpson is perhaps the precursor to the arrival of the Four Horseman of the Apocalypse. No longer content to haunt the radio and MTV, this sees her cast as the stunning lady for whose attention Dane Cook and Dax Shepard must fight for as they vie for the title of Employee of the Month. There is no justifiable excuse for watching this film.

The Texas Chainsaw Massacre: The Beginning

Leatherface is perhaps the least enigmatic of cinema's serial killers. Freddy Krueger has wit, Halloween's Michael has a backstory, while Leatherface is mostly just a moaning screaming beast. Alas, this attempt to flesh out his history is less than impressive. Extremely gory and harsh, in the manner of the original, this lacks the empathy it so badly needs.

The Guardian

The combination of formerly-successful actor Kevin Costner and would-be successful actor Ashton Kutcher doesn't exactly sound like box-office dynamite. Indeed, this drama about the Coast Guard flops around with beautiful special effects but no emotion. Director Andrew Davis, the man once responsible for the taut and action-packed 1993 remake of The Fugitive, has very much lost his way.

Open Season

Oh my god, make it stop! The summer's orgy of sub-par CGI children's films shows no sign of stopping for fall with this dreadful tripe about a bear and a deer trying to escape the hunter's bullets. Like the awful Barnyard before it, this really feels like not an ounce of thought has gone into it. Vocal stylings come from bargain bin actors Ashton Kutcher and Debra Messing among others.

School for Scoundrels

Director Todd Phillips, of Starsky and Hutch, Old School fame, may not have the most inspirational track record but this adaptation of the 1960 British comedy is deeply funny. The plot concerns a young man's (Napoleon Dynamite's excellent lead, Jon Heder) attempts to become a better man. With actors such as David Cross and Sarah Silverman in supporting roles, this is too enjoyable to miss.

Jackass Number 2

It's been a while since Johnny Knoxville, Steve-O and Wee Man have been on our screens indulging their masochism and perhaps it hasn't been long enough. There's plenty of wince-inducing violence here and some genuinely funny (if obviously excruciating) physical comedy but the sense of excitement seems to have gone out of this circus of pain.

Flyboys

Tony Bill is a director most recently famous for working on episodes of "Monk" and the long-dead "Felicity." How he came up with the money to float this wretched tale of American soldiers fighting for the French in World War I is anyone's guess then. James Franco (Harry in the current Spiderman franchise) leads a dreary cast through the necessary cliches of commercial war cinema.

Jet Li's Fearless

Allegedly the master's last martial arts film, Jet Li is going out on a high with this biopic of Chinese master Huo Yuanjia. As ever with such fare, much of the excitement comes from a visceral thrill of violence, but there is a real beauty in just watching Li move. A brutal kind of ballet.

All The King's Men

This remake of the 1949 classic seems to come at a perfect time: New Orleans is in the spotlight and the world itself is visibly in the clutches of debased, power-gorged politicians. That said, this is lifeless stuff lacking the verve of the Robert Rossen classic or Robert Penn Warren's original text. A strong cast (Sean Penn, Patricia Clarkson, Anthony Hopkins) seem to be hungry for more to get their teeth into than director Steven Zaillian will provide.

Gridiron Gang

I have a dream that one day all the children of the world will be given the love and care and financial assistance that will keep them from being either "down and out" or from "the wrong side of the tracks." Alas, in the meantime, Hollywood will continue to produce films such as this in which The Rock teaches a rag-tag bunch of kids that football can save them. Ugh.

The Black Dahlia

Who better to direct a film about the real-life sensational murder of starlet Kay Lake than the master of stylishly enmeshed sex and violence, Brian De Palma? Adapted from James Ellroy's novel, this is a classy affair all round, excellently acted by Scarlett Johansson as Lake and Josh Hartnett as the police officer involved.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

Apples, apples, apples and more apples are coming into season at a quickening pace. Think apple pie, probably the one dish that piques our memory bank. Juicy, tart apples, sweetly seasoned and piled high in a two-crusted pie, make our mouth water. Hope you will give the dough recipe a try with the simple food processor method below – or if you are still too intimidated to make your own, purchase store bought dough; the rest is as simple as pie.

In chatting with my friend Gracieuse Rives-Georges in Paris recently, I was reminded of her delectable Clafoutis, more commonly known as "the French housewives' cake." This custard-based fruit tart is simply prepared with a crepe-like batter with fruit added. Traditionally made with sour cherries, the dessert, which in France is often whipped up at the drop of a hat, is generally not prepared with a standard recipe. "Just put in enough milk so it's not too liquid" my friend suggests, "but with enough flour for a little thickness." Here the Clafoutis is prepared with apples, preferably tart ones. I have always been inspired by Gracieuse's recipes and hope you will be too.

HOMEMADE APPLE PIE

With thanks to my dear friend Enez Villa Sussman, a sweet lady and a marvelous cook.

Makes 8 servings

For a flaky pie crust

2 cups all purpose flour
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
7 tablespoons cold unsalted butter, cut into slices
3 tablespoons cold shortening
6 tablespoons ice water

For the filling

3 pounds Granny Smith or Greening apples
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1/3 cup brown sugar
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground nutmeg
2 tablespoons unsalted butter

For the Glaze

2 tablespoons milk or water
Sugar (for sprinkling)

Vanilla ice cream or frozen vanilla yogurt, optional

1. For a simple food processor method, process the flour, sugar and salt in a work bowl fitted with a steel knife. Add the butter and shortening and process for 7 seconds. Measure ice water in a Pyrex measuring cup and slowly pour through the feed tube of processor until a ball of dough is formed. Do not over-process or dough will be tough. Transfer to a lightly floured board, and with the heel of your hand, knead the dough two or three times to blend the fat and flour. Gather into a ball and flatten into a large, burger-type patty. Cut a cross in top of dough and refrigerate for one hour or longer.

2. Meanwhile, peel, core and slice the apples to about 1/2 inch-thick. Place in a large bowl with the lemon juice and toss gently to coat. Mix sugar, flour, cinnamon and nutmeg and fold mixture into the apples with a large rubber spatula.

Preheat oven to 425 degrees.

3. Cut chilled dough in half and roll out one-half into a 13-inch round. Transfer to a 9-inch Pyrex pie plate. Pile filling into pastry and dot with butter. Moisten edges of bottom pastry with milk or water. Roll out remaining pastry and drape over the filling. Pinch edges together and cut off excess to about 1 inch. Roll up edges and crimp to secure. Cut small vents in the top. Brush with milk or water and sprinkle with sugar.

4. Place pie on a baking sheet in lower third of preheated oven and bake for 10-12 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees and place oven rack in center of oven. Bake an additional 40-45 minutes until crust is golden brown and apple filling bubbles thickly, about 1 hour. Transfer to a pie rack and cool. Serve warm or at room temperature, with vanilla ice cream or whipped cream if desired.

FRENCH APPLE CLAFOUTIS

Clafoutis (Cl-A-foo-tea) is a custard-based fruit tart traditionally baked with sour cherries. This inspired version is made with tart apples.

Serves 6-8

3-4 tart apples such as Jonagold or Mutsu, peeled and sliced
3/4 cup flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
3 large eggs
1/3 cup, plus 3 tablespoons granulated sugar
2 cups milk
Scrapings from 1 split vanilla bean or 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 1/2 tablespoons unsalted butter, cut into pieces

Preheat oven to 425 degrees.

1. Lightly butter and flour a shallow 10-inch oven-proof gratin dish and arrange apple slices in bottom of dish.

2. Sift flour and salt into a bowl and make a well. Beat eggs with 1/3 cup sugar and stir in the milk. Pour the liquid into the well and slowly incorporate flour into the liquid mixture with a fork or whisk until smooth. Add vanilla bean or extract and stir to mix. Pour mixture over the apples and dot with butter.

3. Bake in preheated oven for 25 minutes. Remove gratin from oven and sprinkle with remaining 3 tablespoons sugar. Return to oven and bake about 5 minutes longer or until well glazed. Serve warm or at room temperature.

Dining in the Hamptons

Vine Street Café

41 South Ferry Road
Shelter Island
631 749-3210

How perfect. Pastry Chef Lisa Harwood, owner with her husband Terry, of the Vine Street Café on Shelter Island, served us Pineapple Tart Tartin as the crowning touch following a fabulous dinner last Friday night. Of course, she served us two other desserts as well. My friend Christian and I had enjoyed tastes, sips, small plates, large entrées and hot bread, accompanied by Lisa's personalized wine choices, for the better part of two hours before dessert was even a thought in our minds. But beware when a woman widely-known for her talent with the sweet finale is in charge of your meal.

The Pineapple Tart Tatin is her specialty and it deserves the reputation it has earned. It is in the traditional tatin style, meaning caramelized fruit over thin layers of pastry that is baked in the oven, but with a twist. Not apple. Pineapple – historically, and here appropriately, the signature of hospitality, good cheer, and conviviality. Also, when sweet and glazed, textured and tart, a splendid dessert.

Lisa roasts the fresh pineapple in pineapple juice in the oven and every good thing you can imagine that might come from doing this arrives on your plate. Topped with homemade Tahitian vanilla bean ice cream, and perched atop delicate pastry – we loved it. Our second and third desserts were great too. The Chocolate Gateau, warm, gooey and presented with a scoop of homemade mint chip ice cream, and the dish of three Sorbets – coconut, raspberry and pineapple passionfruit – brought to mind the phrase too much is not enough.

As did Christian's entrée, skirt steak Steak Frites, which he described as absolutely delicious, tender and buttery. You can either choose that cut or a Grilled Sirloin or a Filet Mignon au poivre with your fries, and an optional melted Maytag blue cheese topping.

I had the special of the night, Whole Roasted Bronzino, a Mediterranean bass, served with spicy broccoli raab, one of my favorite greens. Vine Street offers a special every night they are open: Thursday it is pan-seared Jumbo Prawns with Indian spiced vegetables; Saturday is Crispy Duck Confit with saffron rice; Sunday, Grilled Lamb T-Bone with yams; and Monday, the special is Bouillabaisse, the classic lobster and seafood stew, which I understand draws quite a crowd and demands that you come early. The restaurant opens at 5:30 p.m.

Tonight, the fish was succulent and light, creamy and flaky, having been seared and then oven finished. It felt both decadent and healthful, which to me is the ultimate combo. The vegetable was crispy and bright, which is the way it should be. I find that because of its intimidating bitterness, most restaurants overcook and over oil broccoli raab, but not Vine Street.

Continuing backwards through our meal, we tried two appetizers new to the menu and two of Chef Terry's classics. One classic, Tuna Tataki, was thickly sliced, extremely soft and swimmingly fresh tuna with a seaweed radish salad and ponzu sauce. Aside from my little mishap with a hidden pat of wasabi, it was good. On the plus side, I needed a big chunk of warm bread to offset the sting, and the bread at Vine Street is heavenly.

We also tried a menu favorite, the Crispy Calamari Salad with Frisée. I have pretty low expectations of this salad – it never seems quite right. The calamari is lukewarm and soggy and the frisée often too prickly, but again, Terry hit it right. The calamari was delicate, with a light breading dusted over tender fish, and it was warm. The frisée was soft and a perfect foil to the rich-tasting squid.

The Diver Scallop çeviche, new to the menu, was awesome. Marinating in a thai chili and ginger sauce, the large pieces of scrumptious scallop were served coddled in a small bowl, highlighting their preciousness and reminding us to savor every bite.

Next was the Sherry-Tomato Bisque. The silky texture of the soup, punctuated with chunks of beef-steak tomatoes, was glistened with crème fraiche. The effect was marvelous. It was tangy and light but flavorful and deep. I think it was our favorite appetizer.

During the course of the meal, we drank wine paired specifically with the foods we were enjoying. We tried the Santi Pinot Grigio, the Pascal Jolivet Sancerre, and the Cousino-Macul Chilean Cabernet, and we finished the evening with 10-year Otima port. The extensive wine list offers bottles ranging from $28 for a Jean-Luc Colombo French Rose up to $210 for the Philip Togni Napa Valley Cabernet. There are also half a dozen sparkling wines. More than a dozen choices are offered by the glass and the prices range from $8 to $14.

There isn't enough room to mention each of the interesting side dishes or even the other entrées and appetizers, but I hope to taste more of them sooner, rather than later. Vine Street Café is open year round, five nights a week and offers a prix fixe every day from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. Don't let the ferry ride fool you. Shelter Island is minutes away in the off-season from many East End locales, where a sophisticated meal at the low-key and romantically lit Vine Street Café awaits you.

Think Pink: A Month Of Awareness

True awareness overflows a month. Until then, breast cancer gets October. This is not to scoff at Breast Cancer Awareness Month. The designation of a month for awareness is critical; a reminder that help is needed here and now, and that early detection and education are powerful tools in the fight against breast cancer. October is as good a month as any of the other eleven to show your support, and the wealth of awareness events coming up makes it easier than ever.

The month was ushered in with a tree lighting ceremony sponsored by the South Fork Breast Health Coalition, Southampton Hospital's Breast Health Center, the Southampton Chamber of Commerce, and the Town and Village of Southampton. The pink lights will shine on the tree in front of the Chamber of Commerce throughout October as a mini, East End version of this month's lighting of the Empire State Building pink. Congressman Tim Bishop and Mayor Mark Epley were among the 50 people who attended the lighting of what co-founder of the Breast Health Coalition Susie Roden calls "the Tree of Hope, dedicated to the breast cancers survivors and to those who did not survivor the illness." Roden hopes to move from trees to windmills next year with plans to hang pink lights on the mills in Water Mill and Sag Harbor. Maybe the lighthouse keeper in Montauk even has a giant, pink bulb?

The tree lighting was just the beginning of the South Fork Breast Health Coalition's many October events. Their 2nd Annual Birdhouse Auction will take place on Saturday, October 21. Actress Renée Zellweger will spend the night as Honorary Chairperson, surrounded by birdhouses created by other celebrities, cancer survivors, artists, doctors, politicians, etc. The evening, held at Southampton Hospital's Parrish Memorial Hall from 5:30-7 p.m., also includes a cocktail party and raffle. To see the birdhouses before they fly off into the hands of the highest bidders, attend the preview held at the Sara Nightingale Gallery in Water Mill on Saturday, October 14.

If you would rather show your support outdoors than in a cocktail dress, you can put on your sneakers and head to the Shelter Island 5K Walk/Run. Get an early ferry: the event starts at 10 a.m. Register online at www.flrrt.com or call 631-749-0479. If you have purposely misplaced your running shoes, you can still participate by being a volunteer. Call 631-749-3358 to do so.

In addition to events that raise breast cancer awareness, the South Fork Coalition also has planned several workshops to help women undergoing treatment for the disease. Co-sponsored by Southampton Hospital and the American Cancer Society, a "Look Good Feel Better" program will be held on Tuesday, October 10. The program includes a three-hour session with a trained cosmetologist and a make-up kit.

Other workshops include an October 13th Mother/Daughter Breast Health Evening at Saks Fifth Avenue in Southampton with pink lemonade for the daughters, pink cosmos for the mothers, and makeovers for both. On Tuesday, October 17, a Creative Visualization Workshop employs hypnosis to heal, rejuvenate, and relax. For more information about the workshops and events, or about the Coalition's monthly meetings or four different support groups, call 631-726-8606.

The relaxing continues at the Special Effects' 4th Annual Cut-a-Thon, where you can support breast cancer awareness with a manicure. Though usually closed on Sundays, the Special Effects Hair Salon on Osborne Lane in East Hampton will open October 8 for a regular 9 a.m.-5 p.m. business day. All regular services will be available, but the money made from them, including tips, will be donated to Breast Cancer Help Inc. There will also be refreshments, raffles, and other prizes. Call 631-324-5996.

Then take your new do from the salon to the North Fork for Breast Cancer Awareness Day, sponsored by the SASS Foundation and Swim Across America. This free, educational event takes place October 14 from 9 a.m.-2 p.m. at the Inn at East Wind in Wading River. The day starts with breakfast, followed by a panel forum. After a lunch honoring Jerry Barish, President of 1 in 9, the Long Island Breast Cancer Action Coalition, Dr. Mitchell Gaynor will give a talk entitled "Nurture Nature, Nurture Health: Your Health and the Environment." In keeping with this year's theme, "The Tip of Montauk to the Tip of Manhattan," the event repeats on October 21 at the Melville Marriot and on October 29 at the Waldorf Astoria in New York City. Call (516) 365-SASS to register.

Skin deep with Samantha Altea

Blonde to Brown

I've been a blonde my whole life and had to deal with all the jokes that go along with THAT color hair. So when asked if blondes have more fun, I couldn't honestly say, having never been on the other side.

About six years ago, when I turned thirty, my hair took on a slightly darker hue, so, just for fun, I tried highlights. For the first year or so I would highlight once a year, usually in the summertime, and I didn't even notice when the color grew out. However, over the last three or four years, my highlighting has been more necessary and far more frequent; in fact, I'm up to every two to three months and my roots are getting darker and more noticeable by the month. Talk about maintenance. What a pain!

Thinking of the recent trend of well-known blondes who went dark (think Reese, Gwyneth, and Nicole) and feeling like a change, not to mention being sick and tired of the maintenance involved in highlighting, I decided to follow suit. I wanted to see what it was like on the darker side of life.

If you're also thinking of radically changing your hair color there are many things you should know, so in telling my own story, I've included tips to bear in mind.

First, make sure that you're really ready for a big change before doing anything drastic. I found one of the premium hairdressers in NYC, Antonio Prieto, hailed by Vogue as one of THE salons for everything hair related. I needed a place I could trust, having waist-length blonde hair, and so, trembling, I walked in the door. Prieto's salon is very chic, but the staff is friendly and warm so I immediately felt at ease. It's important to make sure you not only pick a place that's highly regarded and recommended, but also a place where you feel comfortable with when taking such a big step.

I had a consultation with Whitney Lewis, Prieto's color director, and we came up with a plan. Always have a plan especially if you are coloring over the long term.

Because my hair IS so long and I didn't want to cut six inches, Lewis suggested that I go darker over a series of appointments and that patience, especially working with hair that's at least five years old, is the best policy. This ensures your hair keeps healthy.

I decided that because of the length of my hair, going all over dark, all at once, was a mistake. I still wanted a little highlighted tonality. If you're brave enough to go dark in one sitting, with a single process, your hair will take several layers of the dark color, and it will stick (stay) better, as opposed to highlighting with just one layer of a shade, which is what I ultimately chose to do. While my technique might not hold the color as well and while my first instinct was to go dark and fast, such a change, especially on thicker, or long hair, when the over all impression is much greater, is very radical. I opted to be patient and do it slowly.

It's imperative to get a great cut leaving healthy hair to work on. Check. Then Lewis' plan was to add four colors, dark blonde, caramel and one much darker lowlight, as well as the color that I normally get. This way I would go darker, slowly and more naturally.

While painting my colors, Lewis told me that I should wash hair as little as possible after color and use moisturized shampoo, salon quality, something like Kerastase, not Pantene, my favorite that smells so great. But apparently that smell is alcohol, so when I'm lathering like a fiend, the shampoo is stripping my hair and color. Blonde hair is more porous, meaning that while it takes color, that same color can also wash out and fade quickly and easily, giving an unattractive brassy look. So be aware of that.

It was the moment of truth. I waited with bated breath as I dried. What color would it turn out to be and would I ever get the answer to that question……Do blondes really do have more fun?

I couldn't believe how going just a shade or two darker made such a difference. My hair looked more natural and healthy, plus I felt more sophisticated. I still want to go a little darker, taking me almost to my now natural dark blonde tone. But I guess I'm going to have to be patient. Until then, I'll practice with my new look. I've changed subtle things like make up and nail color, which is great fun. I spoke with Joanna Czech, Owner of SAVA Spa, NYC, who says that, "Nail trends are really falling into blacks and whites. Other colors that are going to be very strong (this year) include deep reds and purples that look almost black. We will be painting these colors on short nails and toes. These colors are very pronounced and agree with all skin tones. They also work well for anyone changing their hair color to a darker shade for the upcoming season."

As for that eternal question……I'll have to let you know!

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Late Season Beauty

The Montauk daisy, which many people believe is native to Long Island, is actually a Chrysanthemum that originated in Asia-Pacific, but oddly enough a Japanese flower would become a signpost for the East End of Long Island!

Many people love Montauk daisies; as many hate them. This woody perennial – based on how it is cared for – can be either a welcome addition to the garden, or a nuisance. For example, the smell of the leaves is offensive to some people. If left to its own devices, like most chrysanthemums, the plant becomes leggy and floppy and its appearance unwelcome. However, when given appropriate attention, the plant makes a beautiful display from mid-September through October.

"Daisy" is a generic term that refers to blooms that have a central "disk," made up of hundreds of tiny flowers surrounded by delicate petals. Because each multiple flower in a daisy resembles a single bloom (at least to our eyes, if not to the insects that pollinate them), daisies were for years known as "composites" and embraced by the family Compositae. Several years ago, botanists switched the name to the aster family of plants, e.g. Asteraceae, because of the look of the flower.

Montauk is famous for these flowers at this time of year, when they bloom in profusion in gardens, on embankments and roadways. The botanical name for this omnipresent daisy is Chrysanthemum Nippon (formerly named Chrysanthemum Nipponicum). Commonly called the "Montauk daisy" on Long Island, it is named "Nippon daisy" elsewhere in the world. The Montauk daisy is an herbaceous perennial that is part of the Asteraceae family of plants, just like the fall Aster and garden Mum. Since it is hardy to Zone 5, it is an ideal plant for the full-sun border. This somewhat shrubby perennial has dark green leaves that bear white, yellow-centered, daisy-like flowers. The appearance is one of a classic daisy in shape and color. Montauk daisies will grow to about two feet tall and wide, on a small, shrubby plant. Even one plant makes quite a statement, and it loves seaside areas.

As with all mums, there are a few cultivation tricks that help make Montauk daisies look their best. First of all, these plants love acidic soil. This makes them a great selection for our area on Eastern Long Island, which is typically acidic because of all the oak leaves. The plant requires lots of sun to look its best. And it is an ideal selection for beachside locations in full sun if kept somewhat moist all the time. (To keep the plant growing well, it benefits from the addition of some compost each spring – that helps hold in moisture in the ground.)

To keep the plants neat and from becoming leggy, cut stalks by half their length no later than the third week of June. Again, cut the stalks back in late November, once foliage has dropped, to the bottom-most eye (about six inches from the base). This late-fall cutting keeps a few branches available for new growth in the spring. Cutting the plant back to the ground may kill the plant if there is a deep winter frost.

In spring, just as the buds begin to turn green, cut the stalks nearly to the ground to spark new growth and help control the plant's height. As the growing season progresses, further pinch the tips of new stem growth whenever they reach a length of three-to-five inches. Pinch back only until late July – never after that – or flowers will be eliminated for the season.

As the plant matures, consider dividing it every two or three years. Dividing the plant tends to invigorate it and keeps the clumps producing an ideal number of flowers.

Montauk daisies produce a spectacular fall display, and also combine well with the few other fall plants. Consider partnering Montauk daisies with other types of aster, such as the late-blooming Aster frikartii (another daisy-like plant with vibrant blue flowers). It also works very well with the golden sprays of 'Fireworks' goldenrod.

Montauk daisies are an excellent addition to the fall garden. They are great when used along roadways and embankments because the tough, woody stems are resilient. Used in this way, they produce a car stopping display. This is a plant that needs to be considered in every garden, not only because of its name, but because of its value in bringing brilliance to the late fall garden.

Step On Up

Stairways come in all different styles and shapes. They can be straight, flared, curved, or spiral. They can be made of wood, metal, stone, or combinations of these materials. In most situations, a staircase is an integral part of your home's design and style. Stairs may be steep or gradual, narrow or wide, purely functional or grand and showy. Some are built in place by woodworkers, finish carpenters or stair makers; others are factory manufactured, shipped to a building site and installed by carpenters.

A stair's design is heavily affected by its function. Therefore, a stairway leading from your front foyer to the second floor, and which receives the most up and down foot traffic, is going to be far more stylish than a stairway leading down into your basement. But, regardless of type, all stairs have the same fundamental parts, and it is how these parts are built and combined that gives a stairway its style and individuality.

Stairs are built according to basic rules and principles intended to make them safe to use. These rules, governed by building codes, stipulate the permissible heights of risers, depth and width of treads and construction, placement of handrails, and similar concerns. It is important to check with your local building officials to see which codes you will be required to follow when building your staircase.

Let's identify some of the qualities of these various types of staircase.

Spiral stairs can be recognized by their supporting central post. They are described in degrees of rotation, and may turn more than 360 degrees, one full rotation, from bottom to top. Often associated with the typical commercial style metal staircase, spiral stairs can be built from many other materials. They can provide for a very efficient use of floor space when accessing attics, lofts, second floor studios, or multilevel decks. Because of the small radius of some spiral stairs, minimum tread width at the walk line and baluster spacing need to be confirmed before building. It is important to note that when ordering stairs that turn, such as spiral stairs, you should pay special attention to where measurements must be taken for code acceptance. Many codes demand a 9 to 10 inch tread depth (minimum) at a point 12 to 14 inches from the narrow side. You'll also find restrictions on head-height clearance and railing construction and placement.

Flared stairs are wider at the bottom than they are at the top. Most often, the first several treads and risers are flared, on one or both sides, and the balance of the staircase is straight or L-shaped. Flared stairs give the visual impact of circular stairs at a much lower cost. Requiring less floor space, a flare can fit in areas where a circular staircase cannot.

A circular stair generally sweeps in a broad curve from one level to another. They are definitely grander in style than an L-shaped or straight staircase and are more expensive to build. Most circular stairs are custom designed for high-end houses and installed during house construction. Some come as completely pre-assembled units.

A straight stair stretches from a lower to an upper level in one straight run. Most homes use straight stairs as they are fairly easy to build. The main advantage of a straight staircase is that is doesn't require much floor space. Though they can represent significant cost savings over circular flared stairs, they are less visually impressive overall.

The choices of material to be used for your staircase are endless. For a traditional, elegant look, you might want to stick with the hardwoods such as oak, walnut, or maple. You can incorporate any diameter, degree, balusters, turned balusters, different top rails, landings and railings you want. Stainless steel staircases can be strikingly beautiful and will add architectural interest to any home decorated in contemporary style. Stainless steel spiral stairs can be fabricated to any diameter and style according to your specifications. Stone stairs traditionally accompany stone floors. The steps are usually clad with stone slabs, and the straight or winding staircase has a concrete frame. Massive stone structures are also used. They are either self-supporting or reinforced structures.

The perfect staircase design incorporates safety, comfort, and visual and functional integration into the design of your room. Most often, these elements are simple to put into practice. Sometimes they take some careful thought, and even a little bit of creativity.

Dan's HOME

The Center Of Attention

They can be found in almost every room in your home; they may have four legs, three legs, or even one. They can be made of oak, stainless steel, glass or chrome. They can vary from a standard, rectangular or square shape, to round, diamond-shaped and many others. What are they, you ask? They are tables, arguably one of the most important pieces of furniture to consider in your fall decorating adventures. Tables are a staple in every room, from your bedroom to your kitchen, and they all allow for stylish display space.

The presence of fall is all around us here on the East End. The pumpkins are out in the fields, adjacent to decorative scarecrows, flower arrangements, berries and corn. It is incredibly easy to transform your home by paying homage to the fall with elegant, simple centerpieces.

My family and I have always traveled to upstate New York during the fall season, not only to watch the leaves change and glow with color, but to pick up gourds as well. Gourds are the dried fruit of a large number of plants from the Cucurbitaceae family, and they come in many bright colors, shapes and sizes. My mother would arrange them casually in a glass bowl and garnish them with a few berries or leaves; since they are rarely ever used for consumption, they are perfect for table decoration.

With a little creativity and an eye for color, it is not very difficult to create your own centerpieces using items that are easy to find and cost much less than a professionally purchased arrangement. You can even create some that become edible when the season ends.

What is most exciting about table decorations and centerpieces for the fall are the numerous choices of rich colors and unique shapes available to enhance the atmosphere of any room. Typically, arrangements come in the form of pinecones, pumpkins, flowers, fruit and candles for lighting. For your base, you have the choice of using glass or wooden bowls, trays or platters.

Just recently, I walked into my friend's house and was taken aback by the festive pumpkin arrangement that she had displayed on her dining room table. She had purchased one medium-sized pumpkin, cut out the inside, and placed a thin layer of Styrofoam at the bottom. She then proceeded to arrange fresh Spider mums, sunflowers and burgundy roses in the pumpkin. Surrounding the main centerpiece were small pumpkins, which she hollowed out and to use as candleholders for tea lights. The main pumpkin stood atop a raised cake holder and the whole arrangement was very welcoming. Not only did this take her but a few moments to create, but it was also an inexpensive and charming way to get my attention.

Now, coming from a family that displayed non-edible table decorations like gourds and flower arrangements, you can only imagine how excited I became when I walked into a local restaurant the other day to find an edible fall centerpiece before me. A simple design, this arrangement of apples, cranberries, olives and nuts was displayed on a glass cake platter with twine and pinecone decorations for a rustic look. This arrangement not only smelled delicious, it also made a rich decorative statement.

With any arrangement or centerpiece, it is important to not only consider the types of tables you have in your home for display, but to also incorporate a sense of balance in your choices. For example, a centerpiece consisting of burgundy roses set on a table with elegant, gold-trimmed tableware can be matched with autumn-inspired tablecloths in colors such as gold or bronze. Also, if you choose not to arrange something that is edible, you can still stimulate the senses by placing fragrant, apple-cider sticks, green and terra-cotta eucalyptus stalks or scented candles around the table.

When it comes to fall decoration, you must not overlook the stylistic power of tables. Tables are a place where people gather to sit, talk, and eat. And an easy way to welcome guests and family is by simply taking time to spruce up your four-legged, three-legged and one-standed friends. It is also a great time to show off all of those ornate glass bowls and platters you collected over the summer. So, get inspired by the beautiful changes of fall and the season's bounty, and you'll likely conclude that nature has come up with some wonderful decorating ideas.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

In the past week there has been an awful lot of real estate buzz. Two very "big" celebrity mansions have gone up for sale, one located here on Long Island and another in Palm Beach, Florida. First, Billy Joel announced he was putting his main residence up island on the market. This sprawling mansion in Centre Island, in the township of Oyster Bay, is now listed with Daniel Gale's Sotheby's International Realty for $37.5 million. The "piano man" bought the Nassau County Estate on 14 acres for $22 million and married his new wife, Katie Lee, there in 2004. The mansion has 5 bedrooms that must be absolutely massive, en-suite style, because the main house is a palatial 14,000 sq. ft. The brick, Tudor main house has 8 fireplaces and was acoustically equipped for the musician's needs. There is more than 1,500 feet of bay frontage with views of Oyster Bay Harbor, a four-car garage, pools both inside and out, a pool house, a bowling alley, a gym, a tennis court and a private guest cottage. The taxes alone are $250,000. Joel, who owns three boats, including a $2.5 million yacht, is reportedly selling because the dockage on the estate is not adequate.

The estate is located near the home he once rented in Cold Spring Harbor with wife number two, Christie Brinkley, before they bought a house out here. The singer has bought and sold multiple properties on Long Island, many of which are located on the East End. He has owned some pretty impressive pieces on both Forks. He continues to maintain a home in Sag Harbor and owns an apartment in the Village that he purchased for just under $6 million in February. Just a few years ago, Joel sold his Shelter Island estate that included a private dock for his yacht, which is just one of the features among a long list of upscale amenities on the property. That very private waterfront mansion sold near the $8 million or so asking price. He also owned another East Hampton estate with his former wife, Christie Brinkley, which was later purchased by Jerry Seinfeld. There are also 100 acres of preserve in Orient on the North Fork, once owned by Joel, that is still known locally as the Billy Joel Property.

And as if that news is not have been enough for one week, real estate tycoon Donald Trump has also announced that he will be placing his estate in Palm Beach, Florida on the market. This one will be going for a record-breaking $125 million. This 54,000 square foot mansion has 475 feet of oceanfront in an area that can only be compared to properties either here in the Hamptons or in Malibu, California. A property has yet to sell in that range here in the Hamptons, although it was rumored last year that Adelaide de Menil Carpenter was selling her historic estate for $90 million, but the sale never took place. "The Donald," on the other hand, publicly announced his intentions to sell last Friday. The mansion has features such solid gold faucets, and room to house 16 cars (just to give an idea as to what else might be inside.) If Mr. Trump's estate goes for the expected $125 million, it will surpass the sale of financier Ronald Perelman's Palm Beach property, the highest priced residence in America, at $92 million, to date.

When homes sell in the record-breaking range, it gives realtors a barometer with which to compare other very elaborate, and sometimes difficult to price, properties. It seems that prices just get higher all the time, and sophisticated estates such as this one are being built every day, making high-end sales in specific locations run in a class all by themselves.

Currently, there are 11 estates in the Hamptons listed on the Internet as being valued at more than $30 million, and that is not counting the ones that are for sale but not advertised. It goes to show that although prices on that scale would once have stood out, now they are more commonplace. These homes are packed with every amenity one could think of, as well as a few that one would not.

You can reach Diane at eastendrealest@yahoo.com.

HISTORICAL FACT
Dear Dan,

Have you ever written a story in Dan's Papers about the statue of Winston Churchill, which is located on Brick Kiln Road? I've been coming out here for years and I've always wondered about why it was there and who did it.

Thanks.

HELPING HAND
Dear Dan,

On the afternoon of Saturday the 15th of July 2006, I was traveling down the sidewalk of Southampton town in my wheelchair. I was suddenly met with the misfortune of losing my left front tip-wheel causing an imbalance in my vehicle.

However, the fear of my plight was abated when a very kind passerby retrieved the nearest police and traffic control on my behalf.

To the town of Southampton, I would like to commend Officer Mike Horston and Lydia Andre for performing exemplary service and going above and beyond the call of duty to assist me.

Realizing my uncomfortable circumstance, they both escorted me safely to the Southampton train station from Main Street. Thank you Southampton for employing such heroes. The conveyance of concern for my safety and well being by your very finest representatives will not be forgotten. It was a blessing to find that kindness and good deeds are not lost. At least not in Southampton.

Thank you again.

FACES IN THE NEWS
Dear Dan:

I enjoyed reading "Neighbor: Katie Couric News Anchor" (Jerry Cimisi — September 15th) After watching new CBS Evening News anchor Katie Couric, I must observe that in the end she may not have any impact on the ratings for CBS Evening News.

Previous generations grew up around the television set, learning about events of the day. Everyone had their favorite: Douglas Edwards, Walter Cronkite, Roger Mudd, Dan Rather and recently Bob Schiefler (CBS); Chet Huntley and David Brinkley, Tom Brokaw and Brian Williams (NBC); and Frank Reynolds, Max Robinson, Howard K. Smith, Harry Reasoner, Barbara Walters, Peter Jennings and Charles Gibson (ABC).

Today's generation has many more alternatives to select from including all news radio, cable news stations such as CNBC, CNN and FOX, PBS, BBC, the Internet and bloggers. A growing population of new immigrants support their own television stations.

Local ABC, CBS and NBC affiliates have access to satellite broadcasts that duplicate many of the same stories carried by their national news broadcasts. Even local independent stations such as News Twelve, Fox 5, WOR 9 and WPIX 11 have access to satellite feed. Many local news stations sometimes send reporters to other parts of the nation and world for on the spot coverage.

Our view of the world has changed over time. This may be due to the Big Three Networks no longer having a monopoly on the news. New anchors be it male or female may not make a difference in who tunes in. Lucky for us, we are fortunate to live in a free society with a wealth of information news sources to select from including Dan's Papers!

SALUTE OUR HEROES
Dear Dan,

This past Saturday, I was fortunate to participate in Sag Harbor's annual "Taste of Sag Harbor" festival at the Long Wharf. The weather was perfect, the booths of vendors were imaginative and filled with arts and crafts and delicious samples of food, and the crowds of visitors were enjoying all the sights, sounds and tastes that Sag Harbor has to offer.

In the midst of all of the activity, a woman approached my booth, which was stocked with our turkey chili, clam chowder; fresh baked cookies and my recently published cookbook. She perused through the cookbook and I heard her thinking out loud as she said, "the book might make a great gift for her friend who had been taking care of her since her husband was killed." At this point I could see the pain in her eyes and I went to her and briefly spoke with her about the book. But I had to ask, "How was your husband killed?" She told me how her husband of 19 years was a commander in a reconnaissance unit in Iraq, and was killed with 9 other Americans this past May and that he never got to see their daughter who was born shortly after the tragedy.

As the music played and people filled their tummies with delicious clam chowder at the chowder competition or splashed around in the boats racing in the harbor, this poor widow was carrying around such a heavy burden of sorrow and grief, it cut right through all the activity around me and nearly brought me to tears.

I wrote a few kind words in one of my cookbooks and gave it to her as a gift and as she left I asked God to comfort her.

As Americans, we must never forget that there are those among us that have lost their loved ones either on September 11th or in the Afghan and Iraq wars that need our compassion, love, support and prayers. Whether we agree or disagree with the political decisions regarding war, we must never forget to be aware of those right here around us that are grieving. That reality was made clear to me on a beautiful, late summer afternoon on the Long Wharf in Sag Harbor.

RUNS IN THE FAMILY
Dear Dan,

From the same Springs family (C.E. Kings & Sons) that have installed your awnings and boat/yacht covers throughout the entire East End of Long Island since 1948, and, as the next in line of this creative generation, I would like to introduce my furniture design and custom woodwork company, Travis King Studio, for bath – kitchen – home.

Feel free to call or e-mail with any questions. For any installation, please call for pricing.

Regards.
Travis King

Travis is a friend of my family. C.E. King does great awnings. –DR

Police Blotter

The Wetsuit Caper

An employee here at Dan's Papers was returning from the ocean after a quick surfing session. Upon his return he realized he forgot his wetsuit and headed back to the beach. At this point another employee came into the office and said he had noticed a wetsuit in the middle of the street on Halsey Lane on his way to work. When he learned that there was a missing wetsuit, the two employees immediately ran back to the spot in the street, BUT IT WASN'T THERE! The two of us are asking you, the good citizens of the Hamptons, to return a wetsuit to the Dan's Papers office if you found it in the street. We would really appreciate it, because the ocean is starting to get a little chilly.

Pocket Computer Caper

A man reported to police that a pocket computer was stolen from a shop in Bridgehampton. The pick-pocket pocket computer picker picked a pocket p.c. but not from a pocket. How many pocket computers did the pocket-computer pick-pocket pick?

Hot Pink Bag

A woman in East Hampton reported to police that her hot-pink handbag had been misplaced. There was no comment on whether or not the hot-pink handbag was stolen. Police believe that the person that stole the handbag drives a Mazda Miata.

Stolen Quarters

$300 in quarters was stolen from a man's house in East Hampton. Police are scouting out the local Laundromats and arcades.

Noise Complaint

Last week, police were called to a home in East Hampton on two separate occasions for noise complaints. Both complaints were made by the same woman. After the second complaint, police advised the woman to turn down her television set.

Motorcycle

A whacky motorcycle speedster in Southampton was racing down the road at 100 miles an hour after trying to escape, you guessed it, a speeding ticket. Police were able to catch up with him when he hit traffic. So he dumped the motorcycle on the street and fled on foot. The police officer began a foot pursuit and chased the motorcyclist through the street, but did not catch him. Instead, another motorist, who saw the fleeing motorcyclist and the police officer chasing after him, got out of his car and tackled him. The police officer then nailed the guy with some pepper spray. I know, I can't believe the story either. But look at the words, they AREN'T in italic, and you know what that means. It means that it's the part of the blotter that I'm not making up!

Not So Sweet

A man in Sag Harbor was arrested after he decided to host a sweet sixteen party at his home. Police arrested the man after they found out that he was supplying alcohol at the party. All of the wine coolers, Jello shots, Bud Light kegs, hard lemonade, rum punch, and ice-shots were "confiscated" by police.

Menace

A 20-year-old and a 17-year-old in Sag Harbor were arrested for menacing and harassment by Sag Harbor police after they chased around another teenager in their car and then on foot. The teenager was able to escape by hiding behind a wooded lot. Police have confirmed that neither of the arrested boys are Dennis the Menace.
